TREMENDOUS LINDBERGH RECEPTION

EMPIRE CITY OUTRANKS THE ENTIRE WORLD IN ITS OVATION

Welcome Given the Nation's Beloved Hero Greater Than That of Paris, London, Brussels and Washington, D. C., Together—New York City Never Does Things Halfway—Two Million People Jam the Canyon of Broadway—Most Marvellous Mass of People Ever Assembled To Honor a Returning Citizen.

After Paris, Brussels, London and Washington—New York.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh stood Monday in the middle of the vastest amphitheater in the world, which is City Hall park, flanked by the sky scrapers of lower Manhattan, and looked with wonder upon the crowd.

It stretched down away Broadway; it jammed and surged in Park Row; it fought under, on and atop Brooklyn bridge; billows of humanity well-ed up out of Nassau, Park Place, Chambers and every street and alley centering upon the plaza. Serried windows sweeping up into the blue thronged; persons clung to dizzy cornices like bats. The mad sea of human voices dimmed the blare of brass bands.

Lindbergh leaned close to the microphone and spoke. Silence fell over the crowd about to hear his voice for the first time.

"If all the crowds and celebrations I have seen," he said, "were dropped into the middle of this one they would be swallowed up like a handful of hobbies in a London mob!"

It isn't within the realm of likelihood that any one individual in the history of the world ever was acclaimed by a more stupendous multitude. The receptions to Admiral George Dewey and General John J. Pershing, when they came back with the glories of war, were something like it, yet far from as great as the welcome to the hero of peace.

Lindbergh had seen the great marine parade which escorted him up the bay and he had watched double lines of police fighting the people back as he was borne thru tapetinsed Broadway to City hall.

But after Mayor Walker there presented him with the freedom of the city and decorated him with the medal of Valor of the City of New York, he was to hear the roaring babel of every tongue on the face of the globe as the hordes of the East-side and the Ghetto swarmed into Lafayette street; he was to see the blue and dark lines of police and soldiers in Fifth avenue sway and bend like the fluttering ticker tape above him under the impact of ever-increasing crowds; he was to see the crowds tear thru a levee where the tides of humanity cross-current at the avenue and Forty-second street; he was to march thru miles of his peers and fellow militiamen standing at attention while he passed on his way to Central park.

And on the Mall in the park he was to review the whole pageant in the midst of a throng that spread over the rolling lawns as far as the eye could reach.

This was a day's work but all of it he watched with a keen, intelligent eye, the Lindbergh grin flashing in the brilliant afternoon sun as one fine feature or another of the celebration caught his fancy, both withal the most amazingly unperturbed young man that ever suddenly found himself sitting on top of the world.

Police, trained in crowd computation, held up their nightsticks in dismay and inability Monday and declined to hazard within 500,000 as to how many persons actually participated in Monday's reception to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

Newspapers, however, for headline purposes, seemed agreed that 2,000,000 persons and upward saw Lindbergh, or tried to, within the city limits.

PROBE DEATH SHORTER BOY WAS DROWNED

Dry Clothing Found on Land That Had Been Submerged Excites Suspicion.

Since the clothes of Garnet Shorter, 11 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Shorter, Westerville, found drowned in Alum creek, Friday, were located in a tight roll on the banks of Alum creek about an eighth of a mile above the spot where his body was discovered after a week's disappearance, officials have begun an investigation.

Frank Shorter, the boy's uncle, found the clothes, Sunday, beside a galvanized wash tub on the banks where the creek has overflowed since boy's disappearance. Due to the fact that the clothes showed no signs of having been submerged, it is the belief that they may have been placed there since the finding of the boy's body.

Officials have offered several theories before this as to how the boy met his death, finally attributing it to drowning while swimming. His body was found without any clothing.

AMBULANCE SERVICE.

HENRY FORD DANCES MAKE DISCUSSION

Parents After Seeing What is Being Taught Promptly Withdraw Objections.

A very interesting thing happened the other day in Dearborn, Michigan the home town of Henry Ford. As most persons know, Mr. Ford has long been interested in restoring to public knowledge and favor some of the oldtime dances, such as the schottische, the polka, the gallop, and lancers, the Virginia reel and the Portland fancy. His object has been to offer something that was graceful and harmonious in place of the grotesque and often vulgar contortions of many of the modern dances. To that end he has hired and maintained instructors and an orchestra familiar with the old dances and the music that went with them.

A school committee of Dearborn, getting Mr. Ford's point of view and being in sympathy with it, introduced dancing and deportment as a part of the curriculum. A group of parents objected. They circulated a petition, which was signed by several hundred parents, asking that the classes be discontinued. The answer of query whether it is best or safe to attend one of the classes, and with it went the promise that, if the signers after seeing what was taught, were still of the opinion that the work should be discontinued their wishes would be respected.

The parents accepted. Fifty grade-school children took part. They first demonstrated the proper way to enter and to leave a room, to bow, to shake hands, to make and acknowledge an introduction, to carry on a conversation and to display all the other courtesies that went with the occasion. Then came the dances, which came nearer to representing the old folk dances of England and the continent than anything else that we have had in this country.

The parents accepted. Fifty grade ally, nearly a dozen of them made impromptu speeches of approval and the assembly voted to continue the classes.

To many persons of the older generation the incident may be disquieting, even appalling. We do not wish to side either with or against them, for we know that, like those parents who approve, they have only the welfare of their children at heart. We do, however, venture to suggest the the committee was an invitation to endeavor wholly to suppress that natural joyousness and gaiety of youth which finds its readiest expression in rhythmic motion; whether the tendency of the age to overdo the matter cannot be checked by substituting something more wholesome and just as attractive.—Youth's Companion.

Original "Sarcophagus"

The Greek word "sarcophagus" means flesh-eating. This word was given by the ancient Greeks to a kind of limestone used for coffins. It was supposed to consume the flesh of the dead. Hence the name came to be applied to a stone chest for receiving a dead body.

STANDING YOUR GROUND

The following story is told about Henry Ward Beecher as a boy:

"The teacher in the school he attended asked a boy a question which the boy answered. Apparently the teacher was much incensed at the answer and cried testily, 'Sit down!' The abashed boy sat abruptly down. Several boys were asked the same question and gave the same answer and promptly became confused when the teacher voiced his unexplained disapproval.

Finally Beecher was called and gave the same answer as the other boys. 'Sit down!' roared the teacher. But Beecher held his ground and insisted that the answer was correct. For a few moments the teacher stormed at him, but seeing Beecher obdurate and convinced, he smiled and said: 'Well, boys, you were all correct, but Beecher was the only one sure enough to stand up for it.'

"Let no one falter," said Lincoln, "who thinks he is right. It is important not only to give the right answer but to stick tough thick and thin to it."

Nix on "Nuts" Avenue

When Colonel Nuts, staff officer to George Washington, returned after the Revolutionary war a street in his home town, Phoenixville, Pa., was named "Nuts avenue" in his honor. "Nut" having become an overworked slangy term, residents of the Pennsylvania town, tired of being kidded, have petitioned the council to change the street's name to "Valley Forge road."

Black Furs Dyed White

As the result of chemical experiments, black furs may be dyed white on a commercial scale. Through advances in dyeing, it is now possible to produce on furs effects such as formerly could be made only on textile fabrics, as printing, etching, stencil work and multi-colored effects.

VIBRATIONS

In the Water Guide Deep-Sea Fish.

Just as we humans must depend on vibrations of various sorts to know what is going on of the air, making sound, and of what science calls the ether, making light—so do fish depend on vibrations in the water, declares Mack Sennett, the movie producer who is also a student of deep-sea life, in an article in this week's Liberty.

"The life of the deep-sea fish depends upon a consciousness of vibrations far beyond what our scientists have, thus far, been able to puzzle out," the writer asserts. "In some way vibration takes the place of smell, sight and hearing. Blood spilled in the deep-sea water, for instance, instantly attracts the attention of cannibal fish that cannot see the length of their own bodies and apparently are without any sense of smell.

"For instance," Sennett continues, "a tuna is hooked by a fisherman and the struggle begins. I have seen a shark half a mile away, swimming in the opposite direction, turn instantly and make for the quarry. Certainly he can't see what is going on from that distance; he surely doesn't hear the tuna churning the water mightily; there's no blood yet to smell and he couldn't smell it if there was. The shark gets the news by vibration—just as one submarine is able to detect by vibration the presence of another submarine."

Five times the electrical energy now obtainable from coal is being produced by a new system of carbonization in England. The secret of the process is an accurate chemical device for determining the temperature of powdered coal.

MAKE USE OF MAPS AS DRESS PATTERNS

Old maps are amusing and interesting, says the Paris correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor. Whether they will be altogether suitable as patterns for dresses remains to be seen. The French couturiers, who have ransacked the world for ideas, have now hit upon the notion of designing geographical frocks. They have taken the Sixteenth and Seventeenth century maps and propose to convey their quaint colors and contours to silks and satins. Afternoon and evening robes are dotted with many-starred mariners' compasses and little images indicating winds.

Sometimes the new frocks are covered with wavy seas and tree-bearing islands, but others are simply bordered with map scales. The firm which first thought of this ornamentation made a large collection of early travel books containing primitive maps. It is said that the new models have been favorably received by the "trade."

"Shut Your Eyes and Look"

Dr. Alexander Cairns, contributing to the editorial page of the San Francisco Examiner, is moved to rhapsody on the subject of education. With great eloquence he declaims: "No Roman triumph staged by American Caesars returning from foreign conquests ever thrilled with such passionate significance as that endless procession of American youth marching away to the seats of higher learning." He adds: "Just shut your eyes and look at them." He follows his own advice and declares: "Note the epaulettes and the music of synthesized talents, and the proud and stately bearing of innate ambition." That is exactly what one might expect a man with his eyes shut to see.—The Argonaut.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

ANOTHER YOUNGEST IN LEGION'S RANKS

Occasionally a wave of claims and counter-claims sweeps through American Legion posts throughout the country regarding who was the youngest man in the fighting forces of the United States in the World war. Colorado recently started the argument all over again, and was answered by a post in Omaha, which brought forth the following letter from Joe Frank, editor of "The Cracker Legionnaire" of Florida and vice president of the American Legion Press association:

"I have been sitting back listening to all these other posts yell about the youngest Legionnaire," the letter reads, "and now it seems as if they have all reported in. I think that I am able to show them all up by reporting Comrade George E. MacKenzie of 1434 N. E. First street, Miami, Fla., who is a member of the Harvey Seeds post.

"He enlisted December 28, 1917, in Savannah, Ga., at the age of thirteen. He was born in Savannah June 10, 1904. He enlisted on December 28, 1917, went overseas March, 1918, in Company E of the Thirty-eighth Infantry, Third division, as a private.

"Soon after he arrived overseas, his age was discovered, and he was sent back of the lines and detailed to hospital duty. He was discharged January 5, 1919, at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., and he will be twenty-three years of age June 10, 1927."

The most recent claims are shown in the following table:

Colorado, Bybee B. Baird; Born March 20, 1902; Enlisted August, 1917.
Nebraska, Max Tenenbaum; Born May 3, 1903; Enlisted May 28, 1917.
Oregon, George L. Bunce; Born April 10, 1903; Enlisted March 27, 1917.

Florida, George E. MacKenzie; Born June 10, 1904; Enlisted December 28, 1917.

Bunce had a hard time getting into the service.

"I borrowed my big brother's long pants and went down to the armory and told them I was eighteen," he said recently. Bunce went overseas with the First division of regulars, served on the front in four major offensives, was wounded and gassed.

Tenenbaum served overseas with the Eighty-third Field artillery. He is president of Omaha Local No. 41, International Alliance of Billers and Bill Posters, and is believed to be the youngest known president of such a union in the world.

Baird is a member of the Pueblo (Colo.) post of the Legion. He enlisted to join his brother, who was in the first supply train of the First division.

Florida Post Aids in Cleaning Up Beaches

In one Saturday afternoon the Melbourne (Fla.) post of The American Legion transformed the appearance of the city's waterfront. The entire membership of the post turned out in bathing suits, row boats and hip boots and went to work clearing up the beaches.

Several useless piers were destroyed, the piling being pulled up with the aid of a tractor loaned by a local contractor. An old fishing house which had once stood at the end of a pier but half submerged, was torn down and the lumber floated ashore. The house will be reconstructed near the American Legion hall and used as headquarters for Big Game.

Mystery Solved

A certain dusky promoter was baled into court charged with trying to sell life insurance without a license?

"Now, Sam," said the judge severely, "don't you know you can't sell life insurance without a license?"

Sam's eyes widened as a great light dawned upon him.

"Well, dawgone me! Ah been wonderin' why Ah couldn't sell no insurance!"—American Legion Monthly.

VERDUN MEDALS WILL BE GIVEN TO AMERICANS

Verdun, France, June 13.—General John J. Pershing, who is abroad, has accepted the invitation of Howard P. Savage, National Commander of The American Legion, to be present at the special ceremony which the City of Verdun is arranging for the visit of the veterans on September 21st. This acceptance follows the report that Premier Poincare will be present. The dedication of the great international Ossuaire de Douaumont will run throughout the week but September 21st has been designated as the day of the official ceremony.

A special medal will be awarded to each of the former American soldiers who has a properly certified record attesting to the fact that he served in the Verdun Sector. The mayor of Verdun will present General Pershing with the first of these medals.

Donkeys' Hours for Labor

In England the donkey is very largely in evidence and frequently these little beasts are overloaded. An ordinance recently adopted by the Latham St. Anne's town council provides that no persons over sixteen years of age or weighing over 98 pounds shall ride a donkey, also that a donkey should be worked from 9 to 1 and then have an hour for luncheon, his harness being removed. After dinner he can work until 6 p. m.

Preference

The ambition of almost every boy to wear a uniform was shown recently in the case of David, age five, who elected to accompany his grandmother downtown on a street car rather than ride with his parents in an automobile.

"I suspect he will be a conductor when he grows up," said his grandmother.

No," said David, "I'm going to be a motorman."—Indianapolis News.

Men as Clock's Works

When a broken pin caused the faithful clock in St. Paul's cathedral, London, to stop recently, men acted as the works. Recognizing the fact that thousands depended on the clock for time, officials of the church placed behind the face of the time-keeper men, who turned the hands every minute during the daytime until repairs were completed.

Sports Outfit Is Liked for Travel

Interesting Variety of Suits That Are Suitable for Any Function.

For the woman who contemplates journeying by sea or by land no costume is so easily adapted to all climates and places as the sports outfit. Not only is it comfortable and utilitarian, observes a fashion correspondent in the Louisville Courier-Journal, but so widespread has become the sports vogue that it can march undisputed into any function at all times of the day. Dress, coat, hat or ensemble—If you travel, the great majority of these should be developed along sports lines.

Plaids blossom forth for springtime whether one is traveling on the high seas or snugly inclosed in a pullman car. Plaid suits, plaid capes, plaid frocks, plaid coats are all well within the bounds of good taste and modishness. A plaid gown taken from the plaid itself always harmonizes with the plaid, but the Scottish clans have given a great share to the mode that is for spring, while the other end of the plaid scale brings again the vague mixtures in pastel tones. One of the lovely Rodier fabrics for use such as this is called "Les Clans Irisa" and under his heading of tailleurs he mentions two, "Les Clans Ombres" and "Les Clans Damiers Tolleine."

Baby calf continues as a smart trimming, for spring sports or traveling wear and it achieves great success as in a Worth model in Spanish wool, called "vivogne," wherein baby calf is used lavishly for the deep cuffs and big collar. Huge patch pockets are another feature of this coat which takes its color in natural cashew.

Tailored blouses in white crepe de chine, with a man's tie in bright red, serve as a smart idea for the traveling suit which may be in brown tweed with a red cast in the color, or even with a gray homespun tailored suit, if you prefer this.

One of Patou's smart spring ensembles suitable for traveling comprises a bright red crepe de chine coat which has patch pockets and is belted, and a tucked natural jersey bodice trimmed with two bands of red and worn with a red skirt. One of his suits would be equally interesting for the journey.

Molyneux uses old pink crepe de chine for a smart traveling frock in which the bodice is tucked on the bias or diagonally and the skirt made with big box plaits. Drecoll uses gray jersey for a traveling ensemble in which the coat collar has revers in mannish fashion and the blouse has green and black stripes in crepe de chine, inlaid. The skirt has a yoke effect by means of its cut.

"Coromandel," a Lesur fabric, gives rise to striking themes for traveling clothes. The old shades which are developed in it found their origin in the play of light and shadow in old cathedral windows—translated into colors in this fabric, they bring browns, greens, brick, wood green, orange, pink and blue tones.

Either coat or frock for traveling may be in Rodier's "Kashnisa," which looks something like varnished wood in its grain, and then there is his "Kashondido," too, which looks something like rep. Cashmere is one of the fabrics for spring and it may be chosen for the traveling frock whether it be in one or two-piece theme.

Big plaits in skirts are favored most for traveling, for they do not lose their plaiting as much as do those in fine plaits. Another point worth remembering is to have the skirt plaits stitched down to yoke depth.

Tailored Tweed Sports Suit for Young Miss

This interesting model is a smartly tailored tweed suit designed especially for the young debutante of the spring season.

TOMAHAWK ISLAND COMES BACK AND GETS OLD NAME

Appeal of 50 Girls of a Portland (Ore.) School to Uncle Sam Bears Fruit.

Portland, Ore.—An island which for over a century hid its face under the waters of the Columbia river has risen again and, through the appeal of 50 girls in a local school, has had its name restored to it.

It is Tomahawk Island. According to the legend, Lewis and Clark named the island because of an incident that occurred when they stopped for a meal at the place where Vancouver, Wash., now stands.

While they were eating, a party of Indians came up. The conference was peaceable and the explorers wanted to be as courteous as possible, so Clark let them smoke his greatly prized tomahawk pipe.

When time came for the Indians to go the pipe was not to be found. Indians and camp ground were searched thoroughly, but the pipe had disappeared. When camp was broken up the question of naming the island arose. Tomahawk was the name chosen.

A few years later, when white settlers began to arrive, they found no Tomahawk Island where Lewis and Clark had marked it on the map. The legend declares that the island was so ashamed of having to bear a name arising out of such circumstances that it just naturally hid its face in the mud.

It appeared again shortly after the interstate bridge was built over the Columbia river. When the girls in the local school were told the story of the island they all wrote in to the United States geographic bureau, with the result that the original name was restored.

For the Absent-Minded

A new invention in the patent office is an alarm attachment to a wrist watch. The alarming is done by a small wheel with protruding points which pricks the skin when it "goes off."—Capper's Weekly.

Before "Standing Armies"

In the early days there was no English standing army. Every man in England was compelled to carry arms or bear his proportion of expense of maintaining a soldier.

More Durable Steel

Steel, from ten to fifty times as durable as the ordinary kind, has been prepared at an eastern plant, according to a recent announcement, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It was made in laboratories several years ago, but at that time, the necessary alloys could not be easily obtained. This handicap has now been entirely overcome, and the strength of the steel has been tested by extensive experiments.

Expect the Best of People

By CORONA REMINGTON

(Copyright.)

AS BOB WELLINGTON looked at Constance Breckenridge sitting beside him in the car a little shiver of delight passed over him, but this was immediately followed by a sense of depression and despair. All golden and flowing she seemed in her little russet sports suit that brought out the high lights in her dancing eyes and ever accentuated the saucy little freckles sprinkled across the bridge of her nose. He liked those freckles immensely, he wanted to kiss them, but hesitated because the feeling of despair had followed the shiver of delight and he considered himself unworthy to kiss even one little freckle.

"What you thinking about?" she asked, looking quickly up at the big man at her side.

"Just that you somehow blend in with the radiant autumn colors around us. See that big oak tree ahead—"

"Fib!" she interrupted, laughing. "That wouldn't make you look so solemn. You looked almost miserable; I decided maybe you weren't enjoying the company."

"Well, Conny, I was thinking and have been thinking for the past six months that I'd love to—to—kiss one of those little freckles of yours, but I have no right to—I'm such a failure in life." The words seemed wrenched out of him and he looked away as he finished.

"Failure, Bob?" She put a sympathetic hand on his arm. "What makes you say that?"

"Well, you know I've lost both positions I've had since I finished college and dad says I'm no account, not steady, yet in neither case was it actually my fault. Last time the elevator boy forgot to call me in the morning and when I walked in at ten o'clock old Etheridge fired me with out waiting for an explanation or anything. And the first time I sassed the boss. He had the wrong idea about doing the thing and I told him so and I was right, the whole office knew it but of course I had no business showing up his ignorance that way and before his employees, too, so I walked out before he had a chance to tell me to get out. Dad's been terribly down on me ever since, says he spent thousands putting me through college and that I'd have been better off as a messenger boy for the telegraph company. . . . I guess he's right."

Conny laughed at him, a gay rippling little laugh.

"Crazy!" she chided aloud while inwardly she grinned: "I'd like to choke his old skeezicks of a father! Now how about the next position?" she continued.

"There's a wonderful opening with the Hydraulic Power people in Saginac, but it hardly seems worth while for me to go after it."

"Bob Wellington, you are crazy after all! You've had the best training in your line that money can buy. You're intelligent and have a pleasing presence. You will go after it, too, and you'll get it. Talk them into it and try to sign up for a year, then see if your father doesn't change his mind about you. Why shouldn't you have it? You talk as if you were some little tadpole at the bottom of a pond instead of a great big wonderful man."

Now, when are you going to Saginac, tonight?"

"If—if—I should get it, will you—marry me, Conny?"

"I'll marry you whether you get it or not—because I know you're going to get it!" she ended. "And if you don't mind stopping a minute—" looking shyly down at her hands, "my freckles are—lonesome."

"You're the best little sport that ever lived," he said a few minutes later after the freckles had been comforted. "And I know now that I'm going to succeed. I never had so much self-confidence in my life before. I've got to go through with it now. I will."

Starry-eyed and radiant Conny saw him off at the train that night and the next day she spent in wretched anxiety while she waited for news. He would get there next morning and would probably go straight to the Hydraulic Power people, say about nine or ten o'clock. By noon she should hear, but she did not. Not a word and he had promised to wire immediately after the interview. All the afternoon she stayed home waiting for news. Every time the door bell rang or the telephone she would jump and run to it, but it was always something else and it was late that night when the message finally came. Frantically she ripped open the yellow envelope and read the lines:

"Failed. What shall I do? Love Bob."

Conny swallowed a lump in her throat, dashed away the burning tears and rushed out the door and called the messenger back.

"Tackle him again tomorrow," she wired. "Make him give you a trial. I know you can get it in the end. Love always Conny."

Two long days and longer nights then:

"Victory. Will be home in the morning. You certainly did it. All my love. Bob."

"I knew it," exclaimed Conny ecstatically, hugging the envelope to her. "I knew it! Darling old Bob. . . ."

Expect the best of people and you've fought half their battle for them. His crazy old father had broken his spirit. That's all that was the matter with him."

HOG SPECIAL MAKES RETURN TRIP SATURDAY

Train Will be in Mt. Sterling From One to Five O'clock on June 18.

The swine special which visited Pickaway county at Orient and Mt. Sterling last Monday, June 6, proved so popular thru the messages and demonstration which it carried that arrangements have been made to have this train brought back into the county at Mt. Sterling on next Saturday afternoon, June 18, from one o'clock to five p. m.

The program will consist of discussions of portin supplements and mineral feeds by Paul Gerlaugh, Ohio State university. Swine sanitation by H. B. Raffensperger, United States department agriculture who will conduct a postmortem of a diseased pig. Folks who attended this swine special last week pronounced it one of the most practical demonstrations of the methods of which the average hog man might avoid disease ravages and unthrifty conditions that accompany found worm infestations. It takes a healthy pig to make a real hog. You should plan to attend this demonstration next Saturday afternoon. The swine special is being run thru the cooperation of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, Ohio State university, U. S. department agriculture county agents Farm bureaus and business men thru out a number of counties in southwestern Ohio.

GOVERNOR DONAHEY'S PLAN
TROUBLES HIS FOLLOWERS

Seat In the United States Senate Now Occupied
By Simeon D. Fess May Be the Goal—Martin I. Davey Seems To Have the Call For the Democratic Gubernatorial Nomination—Republicans Have Candidates Galore With James T. Beggs As the Favorite At This Time.

Governor Donahey has about decided to give up trying to make people believe he knows his own mind. It is more difficult among his friends and close advisors than those who are further away from the intimate workings of his inner thoughts.

The latter, taking the governor at his word and testifying to his sincerity, have convinced themselves he does not desire a fourth term in his present office. But those who compose his official family, or are interested in his political future—perhaps not unselfishly—remained obdurate for a time. They refused to give credence to his positive declaration "I am not a candidate for a fourth term as governor and will not consider another nomination."

But the light at last broke thru and into their consciousness came the belief that the fourth term movement might advisedly be dropped.

Straightway they bestirred themselves to find another office into which he would nicely fit. First the presidency loomed up as the most inviting. The governor was approached on the matter. He put his foot down with an emphatic snap. "I am not and will not be a candidate for the presidency," he declared. "I have no ambition in that direction. If the nomination were offered me I would decline. I know my limitations." This should have been enough to convince these well meaning but over enthusiastic friends. It was a sorry blow to their ambition for they had pictured what it might mean if the governor were in the White House and they occupied a seat close to the official chair. They still refuse to take the decision as final and are busy at work talking about the governor being the logical candidate and the one who can command the support of that great class of people who are spoken of as the bone and sinew of the nation.

Even if his close friends do not believe it the governor does know his own mind. He has a robust body and an equally robust will. When he gestures, as he did in declaring he was not a candidate for a fourth term as chief executive of the state and would not consider a nomination for the presidency, they were gestures of firmness and decision. When he brought his fist down on the table that faces his official chair and made these statements he meant just what he said.

Want Governor For Senator
The impish perversity of many of his supporters refuse to view his retirement from public office; however. They feel that if he were to drop out altogether it would be a distinct loss. So, they say, if he will not run for governor, again and shies away from the presidential nomination we will make him a candidate for the United States senate and pit his strength against that of Simeon D. Fess. They have no fear as to the outcome of such a contest. When this is broached the governor does not pound the table and shout about how distasteful the suggestion is. He is alluringly pacific in his statements and while he does not declare he is a candidate there is no denial the office looks at him with an appealing eye. It is far more than an even money proposition that if the governor is a candidate for any office, when he steps out of his present place, it will be for the senatorship. He would welcome a clash with Mr. Fess and not lie awake nights over the result.

Tho some of the close friends of the governor refuse to admit he will neither seek a fourth term or try for the presidency the rank and file are not so adamant and give to Mr. Donahey the credit of being truthful and knowing his own mind. This is illustrative of a far better insight into the governor's capacity for self-reasoning and pays him a compliment.

The rank and file of the state Democracy, which takes in many of the more prominent men and women in the various localities have awakened to the fact that it will no longer be possible to say, "Oh, we will nominate Governor Donahey again. What is the use of worrying" and let it go at that. There is a strong realization another candidate must be chosen. A new face is to be seen in the gubernatorial chair and with this comes the knowledge that unless care is exercised in making a choice the fate may rest on Republican shoulders. So caution is the watchword adopted unless a mistake be made.

It is hazardous to even speculate on the man the Democrats will nominate, a year and more away from the primaries and with such a wealth of material from which to select. A dozen and more names are mentioned all good and capable men.

Davey In The Lead.

But as is always the case one name must stand out as leading in the race however much in doubt the outcome may be. If former Congressman Charles Grosvenor, of Athens, who was known as "Old Man Figgers" because of his uncanny ability to forecast political results, were alive he would undoubtedly predict that the outlook favored the nomination of Congressman Martin L. Davey of Kent, national representative from the 14th Ohio district. But he would probably have included in his prediction the statement that this depended largely upon question of whether Mr. Davey were really a candidate. That seems to be largely the determining point to the whole proposition. If the congressman wants the nomination he can probably secure it. At least that is the opinion of those who keep their ears close to the ground and can catch the sound of approaching events. Davey is evidently undecided as to which holds out the greater attraction, a seat in congress or the head of the state government. No one can tell until he makes his purpose known and this will be done, he says, in good time. Until then his friends must be content and work assiduously on the belief he will enter himself in the race.

If General Grosvenor were predicting he would probably include in Congressman Davey's assets, a pleasing personality, the more pleasing the closer the contact; a wise faculty in dealing with men and a broad vision in public affairs.

It is a toss up affair just at present with Congressman Davey holding the lead and the other candidates ready to take the plunge if the water is fine.

Republicans Perplexed.

The Republicans are also having their troubles in this gubernatorial affair. Perhaps the situation in that camp is a little more perplexing. A dozen men are mentioned as candidates. But those who are looking in and ought to know declare the chances favor Congressman James T. Beggs of the 13th Ohio district. Beggs has done much in the way of quiet campaigning during the past year and admits the nomination would not displease him.

He and Davey are both young men and vigorous physically and mentally. It would not be surprising to see them pitted against one another in the next gubernatorial race.—George U. Marvin.

Eccentric Farmer's
Will Scatters $100,000

Lebanon, Pa.—William Hunsicker, an eccentric but highly successful farmer, who died at his home at Hamlin, left an estate of nearly $100,000, which is disposed of in a will probated here in 146 bequests of cash to neighbors and friends for miles around, ranging from $50 to $500, and in about a dozen other bequests to churches.

The homestead farm of 215 acres, owned and tenanted by Hunsicker's ancestors for 200 years, and 50 shares of Lebanon National bank stock, worth $175 a share, go in trust for life to a favorite niece, and then, "never to be sold," to the Lebanon National bank, of which the testator was a director. This is the first direct bequest to a bank in Lebanon county and is believed to be the first in the state.

Most of the bequests will be doubled under a clause which divides the residuary estate among the legatees on a basis proportionate to the main allocation in the will.

AMUSEMENTS

The surge of war, thunder of big guns, these are the settings for a wonderful human drama in one of the real masterpieces of the screen. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's much heralded epic of the marine corps, now playing at the Met theater.

"Tell It To The Marines" is a mighty drama, told amid the great battleships in grim war maneuvers; amid strenuous frays in an Oriental wilderness; amid the confusion and bustle of marine barracks—but, after all, these thrills, bits of comedy, and inspiring spectacles are incidental to the love of a young American and a pretty girl—and the gruff but fatherly love of a grizzled marine sergeant for the boys he scores and belabors like a terrible taskmaster, but not heart is proud of.

It is the story of the soul of the marine corps—the story of the human loves, tragedies, and ideals of those whom the world knows as "First to fight."

And it's glorious entertainment! One roars with laughter at William Haines, as the recruit, in his troubles with the paint—his introduction to the "Admiral's barge"—and his troubles with the sergeant that land him in the brig. One thrills at the mighty spectacle of a whole battle fleet in maneuvers—its guns belching flame—and the grim marines who feed them their explosive food.

It's the story of the soul of America. Lon Chaney, as the grizzled sergeant, has a role the like of which he never played and may never play again—a role he does not act—but literally lives. It may well go down as one of the real Chaney classics.

Eleanor Boardman makes a charming heroine and Carmel Myers a subtle Oriental vampire. Mitchell Lewis as the bandit chief, and Eddie Gribbon as the comic corporal, contribute some gems of acting. George Hill, the director, has created a notable successor to "The Barrier," "Zander the Great" and others of his best known features of the screen.

Marine First in Peking

The first person to enter the Forbidden City of Peking during the Boxer uprising in China was "Wreck" Kelly of the United States marines, who was so thin he was able to crawl under the gates and open them from the inside.

Aircraft Production
Up 65.8 Pct. in Year

Washington.—Air craft production showed an increase of 65.8 per cent during the last year, as compared with 1925, the census bureau announces in connection with the opening of the aircraft exhibition here.

Airplanes numbering 1,179 were produced and, in addition, seven sea planes, as against 711 airplanes and 78 seaplanes manufactured in 1925. Total value of the airplane output was $8,771,077 and the seaplanes $99,950, compared with $5,908,335 and $765,324 in 1925.

The total value of products reported for 1926 by establishments in the aircraft industry proper is $20,081,181, an increase of 60.3 per cent compared with $12,524,719 for 1925. There were 87 establishments, including five aircraft engine plants. New York had 16 establishments, Michigan nine, California seven, Illinois and Ohio five each and Missouri and Pennsylvania four each.

NO ONE UNAFAID ON ALL OCCASIONS

What is the main quality of a hero? Fearlessness, isn't it? You'll say, in discussing the chief character of a favorite book, "Why, there isn't a thing he's afraid of." Often you wish that you were like him.

It's hard to be absolutely unafraid. A courageous hunter of big game, for instance, who will face lions and tigers without a tremor, often will dread crossing a busy street, through traffic that you would navigate without a single thought. He feels safe in the jungle, where he is at home. A lion as big as a house couldn't scare him, but he loses his head in traffic because it is unfamiliar to him.

Most of your fears, if backed into a corner, will turn out to be as thin as a halloween ghost. Next time you are afraid of something, examine it from all angles and see whether it is really as terrible as it seems. It probably won't be.—Washington Star

PROPER WALK ON COUNTRY HIGHWAY

Children in Rural Sections Know Better Than Walk With Traffic.

Do you know the proper way to walk on a country highway?

Most persons, especially the city bred, do not, and so the Chicago Motor club, in the poster issued to school children, illustrates the proper method of walking on a country road.

Children Visit Country.

In 25,000 classrooms in this territory the following bulletin, prepared by the club, will be read:

"June days are here; many children living in cities and towns will go to the country. The lesson taught by the poster does not apply to country children. Children who live in the country know better than to walk with traffic, that is, to walk on the right side of the road. Country children always walk on the left side of the roadway, against traffic. Visitors from the city and town are the ones who need this warning.

Some Drivers Careless.

"Cars travel swiftly on country highways; drivers are not looking for anything to cross their paths. If you were to walk with traffic a car might bear down upon you before you could get out of the way or before the driver could stop his car. Many accidents have happened in this way. Drivers whose vision has been obscured by other cars, a turn in the road, a hill, or by poor light have struck persons walking on the right side of the roadway. These accidents, never would have happened if the persons injured had known that the only safe way to walk on a country road was to walk against the traffic."

Speeders Pulled Up by Sounding of Car Horn

One way to make a person behave is to make his misbehavior conspicuous. On this theory, a plan is to be tried in California of sounding the horn thrice when one observes another driver in reckless disregard of law and common safety.

Three toots of the horn are supposed to mean, "Stop that, guy!" It is hoped that this will make the reckless driver ashamed of himself. Perhaps he was not aware that he was doing wrong. Traffic cops say most drivers on being stopped declare they did not realize they were speeding.

If the fellow does not give heed, other drivers are supposed to take up the three-toot cry and the supposition is that the offender will fear that police will hear it and interpret it as meaning "Stop that guy!" Same words; just a comma left out.

Flattening of Springs Interferes With Action

Keeping springs fit is not a matter merely of keeping the friction qualities between the leaves constant and in keeping with the car. A point usually overlooked is that springs tend to flatten out so they are unable to do their best work. This also interferes with the action of the devices that control the spring recoil.

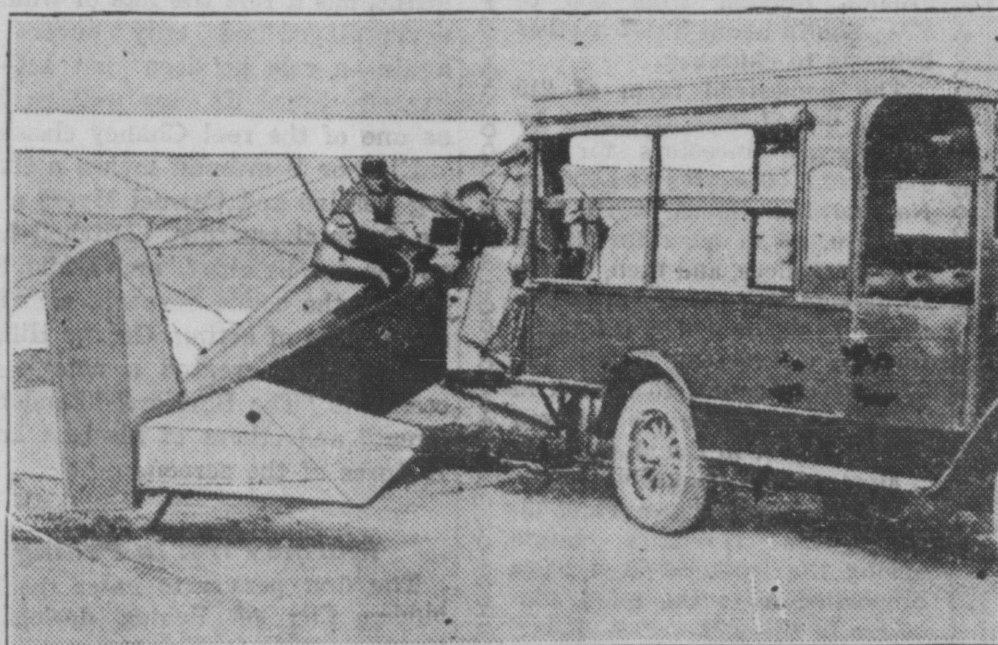

It is the first half-inch of spring deflection that makes for the easiest ride. This is when the springs are doing their best work as the car's natural shock absorbers, and no amount of added equipment can compensate for this loss, which develops through wear. When springs flatten just a quarter of an inch, it is obvious that this much of their first half-inch of best deflection has been sacrificed.

The remedy is to have them removed and rearched.

Open Garage Doors

Be sure that the windows and doors of your garage are open ere starting your automobile, cautions a bulletin issued by the national safety council, which reminds motorists that all gasoline engines when running generate carbon monoxide gas. Scores of motor vehicle owners have died as a result of breathing a small quantity of this odorless gas which cannot be seen. Fresh air alone will avert this hazard.

FILING CABINETS SHIPPED VIA AIRWAY

When the Union Trust company of Cleveland wanted a certain type of cabinet and none was to be found nearer than the factory in Buffalo, the latter made delivery by airway and highway in order not to inconvenience a customer. The photograph shows the cabinet being transferred from the plane to the truck at the Cleveland flying field after a 300-mile flight from Buffalo.

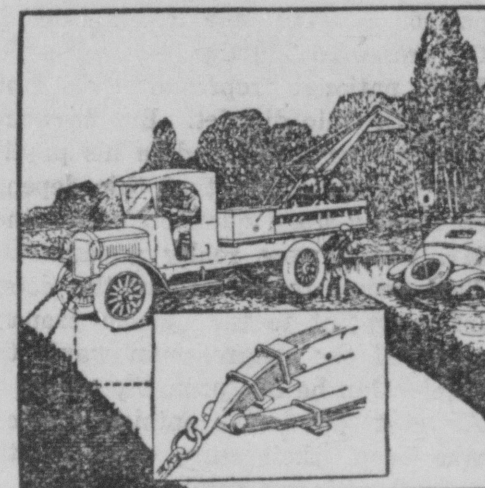

Obedience to Traffic Lights Is Important

Now that traffic lights have become rather universal in large cities as well as in small towns, it is important that every automobile driver get behind the movement to use these signals to the very best advantage. They are not perfect by any means, but with a little co-operation from the progressive car owner and driver, it is obvious that many of the present difficulties will be ironed out and the situation cleared to the advantage of everyone.

One thing to remember in driving through a city in which traffic light signals are employed is to stop on the far side of any street intersection when it is possible. Very frequently when driving along the street one sees a friend and stops to give him a lift. At other times it is a case of allowing a passenger to alight. Whatever the occasion may be for stopping, other than those halts required by the exigencies of traffic itself and obedience to the traffic lights, it is best to stop on the far side so that when one is ready to start again, it is not necessary to wait for the signal. Also it obviates the possibility of stopping some other drivers who may be following.

Hooks on Truck Springs Found Handy in Lifting

The installation of heavy hooks on the ends of front springs of trucks has been found convenient, especially on wrecking cars carrying a crane. When the crane is used to lift a heavy weight, the front end has a tendency to rise, but by anchoring it securely with chains slipped over the hooks on the springs, as shown in the drawing, the trouble is entirely eliminated. If the truck is stuck in a mud hole, the hooks are handy for hitching to a tractor or another truck, and there are several other purposes for which the hooks can be used.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Many Baltimore Deaths Blamed on Jay Walking

Baltimore City has more jay walkers than any other city of its size in the country, according to John H. Truett, director of the Baltimore safety council. Mr. Truett made the statement while discussing the increased number of traffic fatalities in the city.

According to a report of the United States Department of Commerce, such deaths increased 125 per cent over the corresponding period of 1926.

"Four traffic policemen are unable to keep the women on the sidewalks at one crossing in the shopping district while the traffic signal indicates 'stop,'" Mr. Truett asserted. "Compare that with conditions on the busiest streets of New York, Cleveland Boston or other cities."

SOMETHING UNIQUE IN DELIVERY TRUCKS

The eleventh annual convention of the Retail Delivery association of the National Retail Dry Goods association was held at Chicago. One of the features of the convention was the motor cycle equipped with side car. The photograph shows Peggy Byron and the truck.

MAIN ESSENTIAL OF GOOD DRIVER

Should Extend That Courtesy to Others Which He Expects to Receive.

"The main essential of a good driver is to behave as a gentleman on the road, and to extend that courtesy to other users of the road which you expect to receive from them. During a recent trip to Natal," says an official, "I found that the majority of motor drivers there gave the approaching vehicle sufficient space to pass in perfect safety. This is a lesson which I think should be well impressed upon every motor vehicle driver," says a writer in the Montreal Star. "The great majority of drivers on the public road today seem to take a delight in passing each other as close as possible—sometimes with only a matter of three or four inches to spare—forgetting that those three or four inches might land them perhaps for three or four months in the hospital."

Cause of Many Accidents.

"The public would be shocked to learn the number of casualties admitted to our various hospitals through careless driving and through not taking proper and safe precautions when overtaking or meeting another vehicle. It is deplorable to state that large numbers of these cases are attributed to motor-cycle drivers. Watch them any day in the street and you will find them racing past each other with only a few inches to spare. The slightest little swerve, stone, or bump in the street and a horrible accident is the result, perhaps disfiguring a driver for life."

"In approaching busy cross traffic, a competent driver should slow up so as to have his vehicle under proper control, and to be able, if necessary, to stop 'dead' without damage to his vehicle. The various motor clubs are doing a lot of good in this matter, and with their further co-operation it is hoped soon to have the ranks of the unscrupulous driver reduced to a minimum."

Pedestrian is Blamed.

"Now, there is another individual who is to blame for a great many accidents that occur daily. Whenever an accident happens to this individual—at least in nine cases out of ten—the motorist is held blameworthy. Why? For the simple reason that the pedestrian thinks, because the motorist is moving faster, he must be in the wrong, which is not always the case. "To the motor driver, I would suggest that he become a 'gentleman of the road,' and that he act up to it in every way possible. To the pedestrian, I counsel that he think and look before entering a public road, and that he remember there are such things as motor vehicles in this world, which move fast and have only the public road to move along."

Gas for Motors Varies Little Through Season

Motor gasoline being produced for consumption by American motorists has become well stabilized.

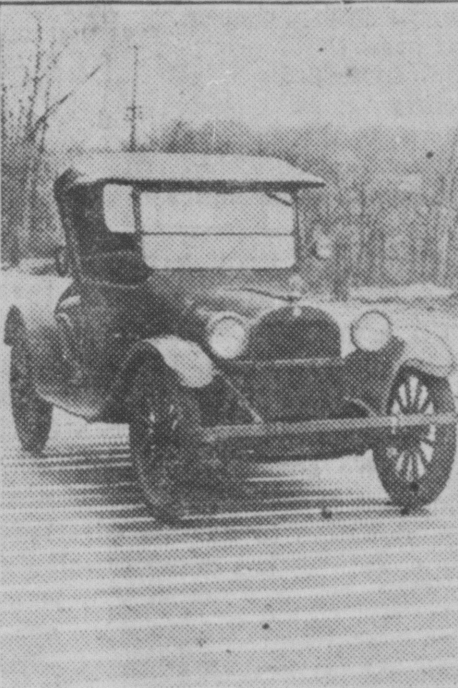

The general nature and characteristics of motor gasoline show that the product now being marketed has become standardized, with little difference between "winter" and "summer" gasoline, according to the bureau of mines, which has just completed its fifteenth of a series of semi-annual surveys. Samples have been collected by representatives of the bureau in all important marketing territories.

Results of the survey show that gasoline being sold this winter is practically the same as that sold a year ago.

The motor gasoline survey recently completed was conducted in New York city, Washington, Pittsburgh, Chicago, New Orleans, St. Louis, Denver, San Francisco, Bartlesville, Okla., and Laramie, Wyo.

Scientists Test Paint Used in Street Marks

What kind of paint lasts longest despite the passage of innumerable wheels and feet over it? Scientists at the United States bureau of standards in Washington are now attempting to solve that riddle by making a series of tests of different kinds of paint used as traffic markers in the streets. The strips of different paints are painted on the streets near the bureau and a careful check made on the wearing qualities of the samples.

Motoring Expense Kept Low by Traveling Slow

Motorists who compare upkeep and costs are all left in the shade by the feat of three Britons who drove a second-hand car 12,000 miles from Singapore to London on £5.

It was not phenomenally low gas consumption or everlasting tires which made the exploit possible, but the fact that the motorists took 15 months to complete the journey and worked on odd jobs whenever funds ran too low.

The car reached England in fairly good shape, with the exception of a new front axle constructed from an old boiler tube picked up in Asiatic Turkey when the old axle smashed after the car had fallen into a ravine.

AUTOMOBILE ITEMS

There is a movement on foot in various places to make pedestrians carry lights at night. Have the motorists been missing some of them in the dark?

The human flesh is a poor register of cold from the viewpoint of the motor. The damp day makes the driver shiver, but it is cool, crisp weather that hurts machinery.

Heavy automobile taxes in England are said to be responsible for increasing use of work horses. We thought money made the mare go, and here it is bringing the horse back again.

The attorney general has ruled that automobiles equipped with living quarters are passenger cars and not trucks, but some of them might be assessed as real estate and improvements.

Abandon Race for Cars Run With Oil Engines

The proposed 24-hour race for cars driven by heavy oil engines, which was planned for next fall at the Indianapolis motor speedway to encourage development of this type of engine for automotive use, has been abandoned for the year, according to announcement made by T. E. Meyers, manager of the speedway, at a recent meeting of the Indiana section of the Society of Engineers.

The reason for the postponement is that a race next fall would not allow sufficient time to formulate rules that would be fair and practical for engineers to design and factories to build cars to compete in it.

Salvage Value of Car

Where an injured automobile is neither totally destroyed nor capable of being repaired but has a salvage value after such injury, which salvage value is greater than the cost of removing and saving it, the measure of damage is the difference between its value at the place immediately before and immediately after the injury, together with interest, according to a ruling of an Oklahoma court.

THE LOGAN ELM FOOD CLUB HAD GOOD MEETING

Interesting Program Rendered--Next Meeting With Mrs. B. W. Young.

The Logan Elm Food club held its third meeting at the Pickaway township school building June 8.

Our meeting was opened by singing the first stanza of "America." The meeting was called to order by the president, Mary Ruth Tolbert, and the minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary. The roll call was answered by some helpful things we have done since school has been out. There were two members that were not present.

The old business was voting for a photographer who is Mary Elizabeth Rader. New business was reading of the constitution and by-laws. The critics and program committee were appointed. The president and secretary took charge of measuring and weighing the girls.

At the next meeting Rosemary Jackson will score the food habits. Individual demonstration on measuring by Mary E. Rader.

Our meetings will be held the second and fourth Wednesday of each month. Our next meeting will be held June 22, at the beautiful country home of Mrs. Bernard Young.

LUTHERANS TO SUPPORT PROHIBITION

Money Formerly Spent For Drink Goes to Buy Homes For Wage Earners.

Benefits of prohibition have been sufficient "to justify the church in its continued support," says a report of the moral and social welfare committee of the Lutheran synod of New York and New England made public Monday.

Supporting opposition to "any efforts to annul or to modify the eighteenth amendment," the report cites prohibition as responsible for "a notable diversion of money, which formerly was spent for alcoholic drink to the purchasing and furnishing of homes, to education and to a higher standard of living, especially among wage earners."

The report will be presented to the twenty-sixth annual meeting of the synod, opening at Utica Tuesday evening.

Especially adapted for localities subjected to sharp changes in temperature and for traveling orchestras that encounter a wide range of weather conditions, a metal clarinet has been introduced in America from France. TREMENDOUS LINDBERGH RECEPTION

EMPIRE CITY OUTRANKS THE ENTIRE WORLD IN ITS OVATION

Welcome Given the Nation's Beloved Hero Greater Than That of Paris, London, Brussels and Washington, D. C., Together—New York City Never Does Things Halfway—Two Million People Jam the Canyon of Broadway—Most Marvellous Mass of People Ever Assembled To Honor a Returning Citizen.

After Paris, Brussels, London and Washington—New York.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh stood Monday in the middle of the vastest amphitheater in the world, which is City Hall park, flanked by the skyscrapers of lower Manhattan, and looked with wonder upon the crowd.

It stretched down away Broadway; it jammed and surged in Park Row; it fought under, on and atop Brooklyn bridge; billows of humanity welled up out of Nassau, Park Place, Chambers and every street and alley centering upon the plaza. Serried windows sweeping up into the blue thronged; persons clung to dizzy cornices like bats. The mad sea of human voices dimmed the blare of brass bands.

Lindbergh leaned close to the microphone and spoke. Silence fell over the crowd about to hear his voice for the first time.

"If all the crowds and celebrations I have seen," he said, "were dropped into the middle of this one they would be swallowed up like a handful of hobbles in a London mob!"

It isn't within the realm of likelihood that any one individual in the history of the world ever was acclaimed by a more stupendous multitude. The receptions to Admiral George Dewey and General John J. Pershing, when they came back with the glories of war, were something like it, yet far from as great as the welcome to the hero of peace.

Lindbergh had seen the great marine parade which escorted him up the bay and he had watched double lines of police fighting the people back as he was borne thru tapetinsed Broadway to City hall.

But after Mayor Walker there presented him with the freedom of the city and decorated him with the medal of Valor of the City of New York, he was to hear the roaring babel of every tongue on the face of the globe as the hordes of the East-side and the Ghetto swarmed into Lafayette street; he was to see the blue and darb lines of police and soldiers in Fifth avenue sway and bend like the fluttering ticker tape above him under the impact of ever-increasing crowds; he was to see the crowds tear thru a levee where the tides of humanity cross-current at the avenue and Forty-second street; he was to march thru miles of his peers and fellow militiamen standing at attention while he passed on his way to Central park.

And on the Mall in the park he was to review the whole pageant in the midst of a throng that spread over the rolling lawns as far as the eye could reach.

This was a day's work but all of it he watched with a keen, intelligent eye, the Lindbergh grin flashing in the brilliant afternoon sun as one fine feature or another of the celebration caught his fancy, both withal the most amazingly unperturbed young man that ever suddenly found himself sitting on top of the world.

Police, trained in crowd computation, held up their nightsticks in dismay and inability Monday and declined to hazard within 500,000 as to how many persons actually participated in Monday's reception to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

Newspapers, however, for headline purposes, seemed agreed that 2,000,000 persons and upward saw Lindbergh, or tried to, within the city limits.

PROBE DEATH SHORTER BOY WAS DROWNED

Dry Clothing Found on Land That Had Been Submerged Excites Suspicion.

Since the clothes of Garnet Shorter, 11 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Shorter, Westerville, found drowned in Alum creek, Friday, were located in a tight roll on the banks of Alum creek about an eighth of a mile above the spot where his body was discovered after a week's disappearance, officials have begun an investigation.

Frank Shorter, the boy's uncle, found the clothes, Sunday, beside a galvanized wash tub on the banks where the creek has overflowed since boy's disappearance. Due to the fact that the clothes showed no signs of having been submerged, it is the belief that they may have been placed there since the finding of the boy's body.

Officials have offered several theories before this as to how the boy met his death, finally attributing it to drowning while swimming. His body was found without any clothing.

HENRY FORD DANCES MAKE DISCUSSION

Parents After Seeing What is Being Taught Promptly Withdraw Objections.

A very interesting thing happened the other day in Dearborn, Michigan the home town of Henry Ford. As most persons know, Mr. Ford has long been interested in restoring to public knowledge and favor some of the oldtime dances, such as the schottische, the polka, the gallop, and lancers, the Virginia reel and the Portland fancy. His object has been to offer something that was graceful and harmonious in place of the grotesque and often vulgar contortions of many of the modern dances. To that end he has hired and maintained instructors and an orchestra familiar with the old dances and the music that went with them.

A school committee of Dearborn, getting Mr. Ford's point of view and being in sympathy with it, introduced dancing and deportment as a part of the curriculum. A group of parents objected. They circulated a petition, which was signed by several hundred parents, asking that the classes be discontinued. The answer of query whether it is best or safe to attend one of the classes, and with it went the promise that, if the signers after seeing what was taught, were still of the opinion that the work should be discontinued their wishes would be respected.

The parents accepted. Fifty grade-school children took part. They first demonstrated the proper way to enter and to leave a room, to bow, to shake hands, to make and acknowledge an introduction, to carry on a conversation and to display all the other courtesies that went with the occasion. Then came the dances, which came nearer to representing the old folk dances of England and the continent than anything else that we have had in this country.

The parents accepted. Fifty grade ally, nearly a dozen of them made impromptu speeches of approval and the assembly voted to continue the classes.

To many persons of the older generation the incident may be disquieting, even appalling. We do not wish to side either with or against them, for we know that, like those parents who approve, they have only the welfare of their children at heart. We do, however, venture to suggest the the committee was an invitation to endeavor wholly to suppress that natural joyousness and gayety of youth which finds its readiest expression in rhythmic motion; whether the tendency of the age to overdo the matter cannot be checked by substituting something more wholesome and just as attractive.—Youth's Companion.

STANDING YOUR GROUND

The following story is told about Henry Ward Beecher as a boy:

"The teacher in the school he attended asked a boy a question which the boy answered. Apparently the teacher was much incensed at the answer and cried testily, 'Sit down!' The abashed boy sat abruptly down. Several boys were asked the same question and gave the same answer and promptly became confused when the teacher voiced his unexplained disapproval.

Finally Beecher was called and gave the same answer as the other boys. 'Sit down!' roared the teacher. But Beecher held his ground and insisted that the answer was correct. For a few moments the teacher stormed at him, but seeing Beecher obdurate and convinced, he smiled and said: 'Well, boys, you were all correct, but Beecher was the only one sure enough to stand up for it.'

"Let no one falter," said Lincoln, "who thinks he is right. It is important not only to give the right answer but to stick tough thick and thin to it."

Nix on "Nuts" Avenue

When Colonel Nuts, staff officer to George Washington, returned after the Revolutionary war a street in his home town, Phoenixville, Pa., was named "Nuts avenue" in his honor. "Nut" having become an overworked slangy term, residents of the Pennsylvania town, tired of being kidded, have petitioned the council to change the street's name to "Valley Forge road."

Black Furs Dyed White

As the result of chemical experiments, black furs may be dyed white on a commercial scale. Through advances in dyeing, it is now possible to produce on furs effects such as formerly could be made only on textile fabrics, as printing, etching, stencil work and multi-colored effects.

VIBRATIONS

In the Water Guide Deep-Sea Fish.

Just as we humans must depend on vibrations of various sorts to know what is going on of the air, making sound, and of what science calls the ether, making light—so do fish depend on vibrations in the water, declares Mack Sennett, the movie producer who is also a student of deep-sea life, in an article in this week's Liberty.

"The life of the deep-sea fish depends upon a consciousness of vibrations far beyond what our scientists have, thus far, been able to puzzle out," the writer asserts. "In some way vibration takes the place of smell, sight and hearing. Blood spilled in the deep-sea water, for instance, instantly attracts the attention of cannibal fish that cannot see the length of their own bodies and apparently are without any sense of smell.

"For instance," Sennett continues, "a tuna is hooked by a fisherman and the struggle begins. I have seen a shark half a mile away, swimming in the opposite direction, turn instantly and make for the quarry. Certainly he can't see what is going on from that distance; he surely doesn't hear the tuna churning the water mightily; there's no blood yet to smell and he couldn't smell it if there was. The shark gets the news by vibration—just as one submarine is able to detect by vibration the presence of another submarine."

MAKE USE OF MAPS AS DRESS PATTERNS

Old maps are amusing and interesting, says the Paris correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor. Whether they will be altogether suitable as patterns for dresses remains to be seen. The French couturiers, who have ransacked the world for ideas, have now hit upon the notion of designing geographical frocks. They have taken the Sixteenth and Seventeenth century maps and propose to convey their quaint colors and contours to silks and satins. Afternoon and evening robes are dotted with many-starred mariners' compasses and little images indicating winds.

Sometimes the new frocks are covered with wavy seas and tree-bearing islands, but others are simply bordered with map scales. The firm which first thought of this ornamentation made a large collection of early travel books containing primitive maps. It is said that the new models have been favorably received by the "trade."

"Shut Your Eyes and Look"

Dr. Alexander Cairns, contributing to the editorial page of the San Francisco Examiner, is moved to rhapsody on the subject of education. With great eloquence he declaims: "No Roman triumph staged by American Caesars returning from foreign conquests ever thrilled with such passionate significance as that endless procession of American youth marching away to the seats of higher learning." He adds: "Just shut your eyes and look at them." He follows his own advice and declares: "Note the epaulets and culture and the music of synthesized talents, and the proud and stately bearing of innate ambition." That is exactly what one might expect a man with his eyes shut to see.—The Argonaut.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

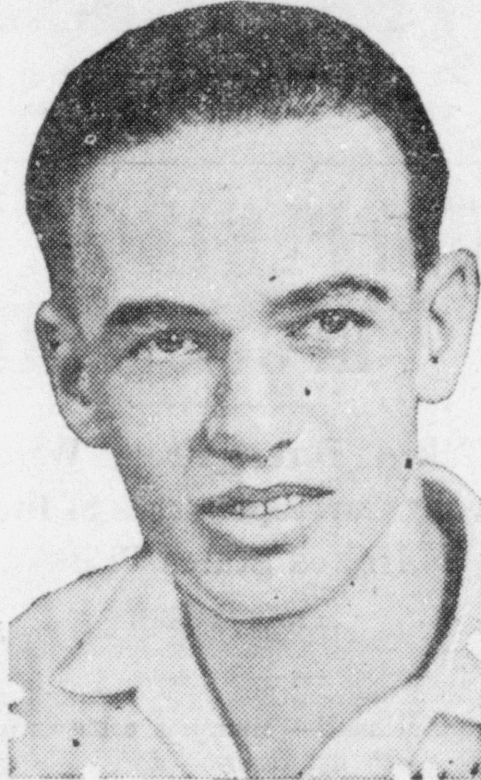

ANOTHER YOUNGEST IN LEGION'S RANKS

Occasionally a wave of claims and counter-claims sweeps through American Legion posts throughout the country regarding who was the youngest man in the fighting forces of the United States in the World war. Colorado recently started the argument all over again, and was answered by a post in Omaha, which brought forth the following letter from Joe Frank, editor of "The Cracker Legionnaire" of Florida and vice president of the American Legion Press association:

"I have been sitting back listening to all these other posts yell about the youngest Legionnaire," the letter reads, "and now it seems as if they have all reported in. I think that I am able to show them all up by reporting Comrade George E. MacKenzie of 1434 N. E. First street, Miami, Fla., who is a member of the Harvey Seeds post.

"He enlisted December 28, 1917, in Savannah, Ga., at the age of thirteen. He was born in Savannah June 16, 1904. He enlisted on December 28, 1917, went overseas March, 1918, in Company E of the Thirty-eighth Infantry, Third division, as a private.

"Soon after he arrived overseas, his age was discovered, and he was sent back of the lines and detailed to hospital duty. He was discharged January 5, 1919, at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., and he will be twenty-three years of age June 16, 1927."

George E. MacKenzie.

The most recent claims are shown in the following table:

Colorado, Bybee B. Baird; Born March 20, 1902; Enlisted August, 1917.
Nebraska, Max Tennebaum; Born May 3, 1903; Enlisted May 28, 1917.
Oregon, George L. Bunce; Born April 10, 1903; Enlisted March 27, 1917.
Florida, George E. MacKenzie; Born June 16, 1904; Enlisted December 28, 1917.

Bunce had a hard time getting into the service.

"I borrowed my big brother's long pants and went down to the armory and told them I was eighteen," he said recently. Bunce went overseas with the First division of regulars, served on the front in four major offensives, was wounded and gassed.

Tennebaum served overseas with the Eighty-third Field artillery. He is president of Omaha Local No. 41, International Alliance of Billers and Bill Posters, and is believed to be the youngest known president of such a union in the world.

Baird is a member of the Pueblo (Colo.) post of the Legion. He enlisted to join his brother, who was in the first supply train of the First division.

Florida Post Aids in Cleaning Up Beaches

In one Saturday afternoon the Melbourne (Fla.) post of The American Legion transformed the appearance of the city's waterfront. The entire membership of the post turned out in bathing suits, row boats and hip boots and went to work clearing up the beaches.

Several useless piers were destroyed, the piling being pulled up with the aid of a tractor loaned by a local contractor. An old fishing house which had once stood at the end of a pier but half submerged, was torn down and the lumber floated ashore. The house will be reconstructed near the American Legion hall and used as headquarters for Bog Scouts.

Mystery Solved

A certain dusky promoter was baled into court charged with trying to sell life insurance without a license?

"Now, Sam," said the judge severely, "don't you know you can't sell life insurance without a license?"

Sam's eyes widened as a great light dawned upon him.

"Well, dawgone me! Ah been wonderin' why Ah couldn't sell no insurance!"—American Legion Monthly.

VERDUN MEDALS WILL BE GIVEN TO AMERICANS

Verdun, France, June 13.—General John J. Pershing, who is abroad, has accepted the invitation of Howard P. Savage, National Commander of The American Legion, to be present at the special ceremony which the City of Verdun is arranging for the visit of the veterans on September 21st. This acceptance follows the report that Premier Poincare will be present. The dedication of the great international Ossuaire de Douaumont will run throughout the week but September 21st has been designated as the day of the official ceremony.

A special medal will be awarded to each of the former American soldiers who has a properly certified record attesting to the fact that he served in the Verdun Sector. The mayor of Verdun will present General Pershing with the first of these medals.

Things Material

A prominent clergyman says that the girls of today "think too much of the material," but we are informed that many of them leave that matter to their dressmakers.—Boston Transcript.

2000 PEOPLE LIVE IN ONE SQUARE MILE

Szechwan is smaller than Texas by 45,000 square miles, with a population equivalent to more than one-third of the United States crammed within its borders, says a bulletin from the Natural Geographic Society. "People abound everywhere. In the Chengtu plain, one of the most densely populated areas in the world, there are 2,000 people to the square mile. They are scattered over the fields, swarm the village thoroughfares and, along the roads to the larger cities, one sees a continuous procession of half-naked, perspiring men, pushing sacks of farm produce to market on wheelbarrow. Szechwan has no railroads. The wheelbarrow is both freight and Pullman car. When it is not laden with freight, a passenger is jolting along with a coolie trudging between the handles."

"Pickup" for Collector

After reposing for many weeks in the window of a shop in Bristol, England, an old blue-and-white ginger jar, which many collectors examined and refused to buy, was finally sold by the dealer, for $3. The purchaser disposed of it to Louis Huth, at the sale of whose collection it brought $29,500. It is one of the "rarest hawthorne jars in existence."

Donkeys' Hours for Labor

In England the donkey is very largely in evidence and frequently these little beasts are overloaded. An ordinance recently adopted by the Latham St. Anne's town council provides that no persons over sixteen years of age or weighing over 98 pounds shall ride a donkey, also that a donkey should be worked from 9 to 1 and then have an hour for luncheon, his harness being removed. After dinner he can work until 6 p. m.

The ambition of almost every boy to wear a uniform was shown recently in the case of David, age five, who elected to accompany his grandmother downtown on a street car rather than ride with his parents in an automobile.

No," said David, "I'm going to be a motorman."—Indianapolis News.

Men as Clock's Works

When a broken pin caused the faithful clock in St. Paul's cathedral, London, to stop recently, men acted as the works. Sports Outfit Is Liked for Travel

Interesting Variety of Suits That Are Suitable for Any Function.

For the woman who contemplates journeying by sea or by land no costume is so easily adapted to all climates and places as the sports outfit. Not only is it comfortable and utilitarian, observes a fashion correspondent in the Louisville Courier-Journal, but so widespread has become the sports vogue that it can march undisputed into any function at all times of the day. Dress, coat, hat or ensemble—if you travel, the great majority of these should be developed along sports lines.

Plaids blossom forth for springtime whether one is traveling on the high seas or snugly inclosed in a pullman car. Plaid suits, plaid capes, plaid frocks, plaid coats are all well within the bounds of good taste and modishness. A plain color taken from the plaid itself always harmonizes with the plaid, but the Scottish clans have given a great share to the mode that is for spring, while the other end of the plaid scale brings again the vague mixtures in pastel tones. One of the lovely Rodier fabrics for use such as this is called "Les Clans Irisa" and under his heading of tailleurs he mentions two, "Les Clans Ombres" and "Les Clans Damiers Tolleine."

Baby calf continues as a smart trimming, for spring sports or traveling wear and it achieves great success as in a Worth model in Spanish wool, called "vivogne," wherein baby calf is used lavishly for the deep cuffs and big collar. Huge patch pockets are another feature of this coat which takes its color in natural cashew.

Tailored blouses in white crepe de chine, with a man's tie in bright red, serve as a smart idea for the traveling suit which may be in brown tweed with a red cast in the color, or even with a gray homespun tailored suit, if you prefer this.

One of Patou's smart spring ensembles suitable for traveling comprises a bright red crepeella coat which has patch pockets and is belted, and a tucked natural jersey bodice trimmed with two bands of red and worn with a red skirt. One of his suits would be equally interesting for the journey.

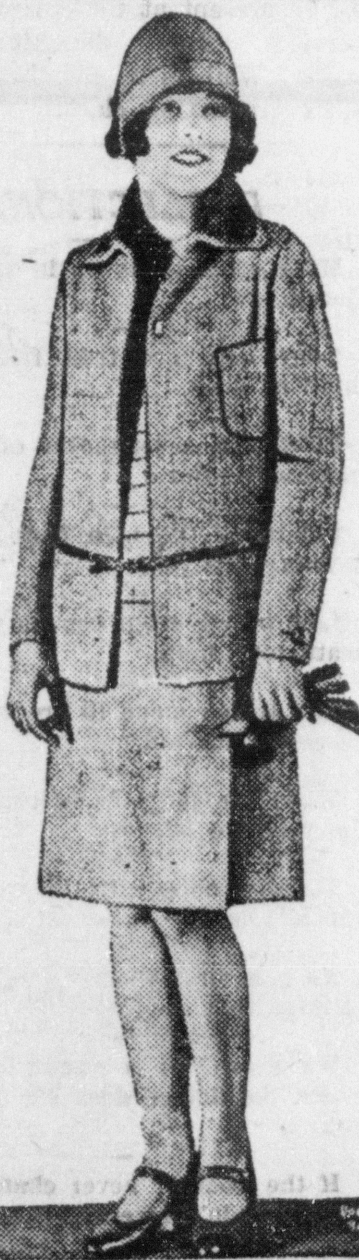

Molyneux uses old pink crepeella for a smart traveling frock in which the bodice is tucked on the bias or diagonally and the skirt made with big box plaits. Drecoil uses gray jersey for a traveling ensemble in which the coat collar has revers in mannish fashion and the blouse has green and black stripes in crepe de chine, inlaid. The skirt has a yoke effect by means of its cut.

"Coromandel," a Lesur fabric, gives rise to striking themes for traveling clothes. The old shades which are developed in it found their origin in the play of light and shadow in old cathedral windows—translated into colors in this fabric, they bring browns, greens, brick, wood green, orange, pink and blue tones.

Either coat or frock for traveling may be in Rodier's "Kashnisa," which looks something like varnished wood in its graining, and then there is his "Kashondido," too, which looks something like rep. Cashmere is one of the fabrics for spring and it may be chosen for the traveling frock whether it be in one or two-piece theme.

Big plaits in skirts are favored most for traveling, for they do not lose their plaiting as much as do those in fine plaits. Another point worth remembering is to have the skirt plaits stitched down to yoke depth.

Tailored Tweed Sports Suit for Young Miss

This interesting model is a smartly tailored tweed suit designed especially for the young debutante of the spring season.

TOMAHAWK ISLAND COMES BACK AND GETS OLD NAME

Appeal of 50 Girls of a Portland (Ore.) School to Uncle Sam Bears Fruit.

Portland, Ore.—An island which for over a century hid its face under the waters of the Columbia river has risen again and, through the appeal of 50 girls in a local school, has had its name restored to it.

It is Tomahawk Island. According to the legend, Lewis and Clark named the island because of an incident that occurred when they stopped for a meal at the place where Vancouver, Wash., now stands.

While they were eating, a party of Indians came up. The conference was peaceable and the explorers wanted to be as courteous as possible, so Clark let them smoke his greatly prized tomahawk pipe.

When time came for the Indians to go the pipe was not to be found. Indians and camp ground were searched thoroughly, but the pipe had disappeared. When camp was broken up the question of naming the island arose. Tomahawk was the name chosen.

A few years later, when white settlers began to arrive, they found no Tomahawk Island where Lewis and Clark had marked it on the map. The legend declares that the island was so ashamed of having to bear a name arising out of such circumstances that it just naturally hid its face in the mud.

It appeared again shortly after the interstate bridge was built over the Columbia river. When the girls in the local school were told the story of the island they all wrote in to the United States geographic bureau, with the result that the original name was restored.

More Durable Steel

Steel, from ten to fifty times as durable as the ordinary kind, has been prepared at an eastern plant, according to a recent announcement, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It was made in laboratories several years ago, but at that time, the necessary alloys could not be easily obtained. This handicap has now been entirely overcome, and the strength of the steel has been tested by extensive experiments.

AS BOB WELLINGTON looked at Constance Breckenridge sitting beside him in the car a little shiver of delight passed over him, but this was immediately followed by a sense of depression and despair. All golden and flowing she seemed in her little russet sports suit that brought out the high lights in her dancing eyes and even accentuated the saucy little freckles sprinkled across the bridge of her nose. He liked those freckles immensely, he wanted to kiss them, but hesitated because the feeling of despair had followed the shiver of delight and he considered himself unworthy to kiss even one little freckle.

"What you thinking about?" she asked, looking quickly up at the big man at her side.

"Just that you somehow blend in with the radiant autumn colors around us. See that big oak tree ahead?"

"Fib!" she interrupted, laughing. "That wouldn't make you look so solemn. You looked almost miserable; I decided maybe you weren't enjoying the company."

"Well, Conny, I was thinking and have been thinking for the past six months that I'd love to—to—kiss one of those little freckles of yours, but I have no right to—I'm such a failure in life." The words seemed wrenched out of him and he looked away as he finished.

"Failure, Bob?" She put a sympathetic hand on his arm. "What makes you say that?"

"Well, you know I've lost both positions I've had since I finished college and dad says I'm no account, not steady, yet in neither case was it actually my fault. Last time the elevator boy forgot to call me in the morning and when I walked in at ten o'clock old Etheridge fired me with out waiting for an explanation or anything. And the first time I sassed the boss. He had the wrong idea about doing the thing and I told him so and I was right, the whole office knew it but of course I had no business showing up his ignorance that way and before his employees, too, so I walked out before he had a chance to tell me to get out. Dad's been terribly down on me ever since, says he spent thousands putting me through college and that I'd have been better off as a messenger boy for the telegraph company. . . . I guess he's right."

Conny laughed at him, a gay rippling little laugh.

"Crazy!" she chided aloud while inwardly she gritted: "I'd like to choke his old skeezicks of a father! Now how about the next position?" she continued.

"There's a wonderful opening with the Hydraulic Power people in Saginaw, but it hardly seems worth while for me to go after it."

"Bob Wellington, you are crazy after all! You've had the best training in your line that money can buy. You're intelligent and have a pleasing presence. You will go after it, too, and you'll get it. Talk them into it and try to sign up for a year, then see if your father doesn't change his mind about you. Why shouldn't you have it? You talk as if you were some little tadpole at the bottom of a pond instead of a great big wonderful man."

Now, when are you going to Saginaw, tonight?"

"If—if I should get it, will you marry me, Conny?"

"I'll marry you whether you get it or not—because I know you're going to get it!" she ended. "And if you don't mind stopping a minute—" looking shyly down at her hands, "my freckles are—lonesome."

"You're the best little sport that ever lived," he said a few minutes later after the freckles had been comforted. "And I know now that I'm going to succeed. I never had so much self-confidence in my life before. I've got to go through with it now. I will."

Starry-eyed and radiant Conny saw him off at the train that night and the next day she spent in wretched anxiety while she waited for news. He would get there next morning and would probably go straight to the Hydraulic Power people, say about nine or ten o'clock. By noon she should hear, but she did not. Not a word and he had promised to wire immediately after the interview. All the afternoon she stayed home waiting for news. Every time the door bell rang or the telephone she would jump and run to it, but it was always something else and it was late that night when the message finally came. Frantically she ripped open the yellow envelope and read the lines:

"Failed. What shall I do? Love Bob."

Conny swallowed a lump in her throat, dashed away the burning tears and rushed out the door and called the messenger back.

"Tackle him again tomorrow," she wired. "Make him give you a trial. I know you can get it in the end. Love always Conny."

Two long days and longer nights then:

"Victory. Will be home in the morning. You certainly did it. All my love. Bob."

"I knew it," exclaimed Conny ecstatically, hugging the envelope to her. "I knew it! Darling old Bob. . . ."

Expect the best of people and you've fought half their battle for them. His crazy old father had broken his spirit. That's all that was the matter with him."

HOG SPECIAL MAKES RETURN TRIP SATURDAY

Train Will be in Mt. Sterling From One to Five O'clock on June 18.

The swine special which visited Pickaway county at Orient and Mt. Sterling last Monday, June 6, proved so popular thru the messages and demonstration which it carried that arrangements have been made to have this train brought back into the county at Mt. Sterling on next Saturday afternoon, June 18, from one o'clock to five p. m.

The program will consist of discussions of portein supplements and mineral feeds by Paul Gerlaugh, Ohio State university. Swine sanitation by H. B. Raffensperger, United States department agriculture who will conduct a postmortem of a diseased pig. Folks who attended this swine special last week pronounced it one of the most practical demonstrations of the methods of which the average hog man might avoid disease ravages and unthrifty conditions that accompany found worm infestations. It takes a healthy pig to make a real hog. You should plan to attend this demonstration next Saturday afternoon. The swine special is being run thru the cooperation of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, Ohio State university, U. S. department agriculture county agents Farm bureaus and business men thru-out a number of counties in southwestern Ohio.

GOVERNOR DONAHEY'S PLAN TROUBLES HIS FOLLOWERS

Seat In the United States Senate Now Occupied
By Simeon D. Fess May Be the Goal—Martin L.
Davey Seems To Have the Call For the Democratic Gubernatorial Nomination—Republicans
Have Candidates Galore With James T. Begg
As the Favorite At This Time.

Governor Donahey has about decided to give up trying to make people believe he knows his own mind. It is more difficult among his friends and close advisors than those who are further away from the intimate workings of his inner thoughts.

The latter, taking the governor at his word and testifying to his sincerity, have convinced themselves he does not desire a fourth term in his present office. But those who compose his official family, or are interested in his political future—perhaps not unselfishly—remained obdurate for a time. They refused to give credence to his positive declaration "I am not a candidate for a fourth term as governor and will not consider another nomination."

But the light at last broke thru and into their consciousness came the belief that the fourth term movement might advisedly be dropped.

Straightway they bestirred themselves to find another office into which he would nicely fit. First the presidency loomed up as the most inviting. The governor was approached on the matter. He put his foot down with a emphatic snap. "I am not and will not be a candidate for the presidency," he declared. "I have no ambition in that direction. If the nomination were offered me I would decline. I know my limitations." This should have been enough to convince these well meaning but over enthusiastic friends. It was a sorry blow to their ambition for they had pictured what it might mean if the governor were in the White House and they occupied a seat close to the official chair. They still refuse to take the decision as final and are busy at work talking about the governor being the logical candidate and the one who can command the support of that great class of people who are spoken of as the bone and sinew of the nation.

Even if his close friends do not believe it the governor does know his own mind. He has a robust body and an equally robust will. When he gestures, as he did in declaring he was not a candidate for a fourth term as chief executive of the state and would not consider a nomination for the presidency, they were gestures of firmness and decision. When he brought his fist down on the table that faces his official chair and made these statements he meant just what he said.

Want Governor For Senator
The impish perversity of many of his supporters refuse to view his retirement from public office, however. They feel that if he were to drop out altogether it would be a distinct loss. So, they say, if he will not run for governor, again and shies away from the presidential nomination we will make him a candidate for the United States senate and pit his strength against that of Simeon D. Fess. They have no fear as to the outcome of such a contest. When this is broached the governor does not pound the table and shout about how distasteful the suggestion is. He is alluringly pacific in his statements and while he does not declare he is a candidate there is no denial the office looks at him with an appealing eye. It is far more than an even money proposition that if the governor is a candidate for any office, when he steps out of his present place, it will be for the senatorship. He would welcome a clash with Mr. Fess and not lie awake nights over the result.

The some of the close friends of the governor refuse to admit he will neither seek a fourth term or try for the presidency the rank and file are not so adamant and give to Mr. Donahey the credit of being truthful and knowing his own mind. This is illustrative of a far better insight into the governor's capacity for self-reasoning and pays him a compliment.

The rank and file of the state Democracy, which takes in many of the more prominent men and women in the various localities have awakened to the fact that it will no longer be possible to say, "Oh, we will nominate Governor Donahey again. What is the use of worrying" and let it go at that. There is a strong realization another candidate must be chosen. A new face is to be seen in the gubernatorial chair and with this comes the knowledge that unless care is exercised in making a choice the face may rest on Republican shoulders. So caution is the watchword adopted unless a mistake be made.

It is hazardous to even speculate on the man the Democrats will nominate, a year and more away from the primaries and with such a wealth of material from which to select. A dozen and more names are mentioned all good and capable men.

Davey In The Lead.

But as is always the case one name must stand out as leading in the race however much in doubt the outcome may be. If former Congressman Charles Grosvenor, of Athens, who was known as "Old Man Figgers" be cause of his uncanny ability to forecast political results, were alive he would undoubtedly predict that the outlook favored the nomination of Congressman Martin L. Davey of Kent, national representative from the 14th Ohio district. But he would probably have included in his prediction the statement that this depended largely upon question of whether Mr. Davey were really a candidate. That seems to be largely the determining point to the whole proposition. If the congressman wants the nomination he can probably secure it. At least that is the opinion of those who keep their ears close to the ground and can catch the sound of approaching events. Davey is evidently undecided as to which holds out the greater attraction, a seat in congress or the head of the state government. No one can tell until he makes his purpose known and this will be done, he says, in good time. Until then his friends must be content and work assiduously on the belief he will enter himself in the race.

If General Grosvenor were predicting he would probably include in Congressman Davey's assets, a pleasing personality, the more pleasing the closer the contact; a wise faculty in dealing with men and a broad vision in public affairs.

It is a toss up affair just at present with Congressman Davey holding the lead and the other candidates ready to take the plunge if the water is fine.

Republicans Perplexed.

The Republicans are also having their troubles in this gubernatorial affair. Perhaps the situation in that camp is a little more perplexing. A dozen men are mentioned as candidates. But those who are looking in and ought to know declare the chances favor Congressman James T. Begg of the 13th Ohio district. Begg has done much in the way of quiet campaigning during the past year and admits the nomination would not displease him.

He and Davey are both young men and vigorous physically and mentally. It would not be surprising to see them pitted against one another in the next gubernatorial race.—George U. Marvin.

Eccentric Farmer's Will Scatters $100,000

Lebanon, Pa.—William Hunsicker, an eccentric but highly successful farmer, who died at his home at Hamlin, left an estate of nearly $100,000, which is disposed of in a will probated here in 146 bequests of cash to neighbors and friends for miles around, ranging from $50 to $500, and in about a dozen other bequests to churches.

The homestead farm of 215 acres, owned and tenanted by Hunsicker's ancestors for 200 years, and 50 shares of Lebanon National bank stock, worth $175 a share, go in trust for life to a favorite niece, and then, "never to be sold," to the Lebanon National bank, of which the testator was a director. This is the first direct bequest to a bank in Lebanon county and is believed to be the first in the state.

Most of the bequests will be doubled under a clause which divides the residuary estate among the legatees on a basis proportionate to the main allocation in the will.

AMUSEMENTS

The surge of war, thunder of big guns, these are the settings for a wonderful human drama in one of the real masterpieces of the screen. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's much heralded epic of the marine corps, now playing at the Met theater.

"Tell It To The Marines" is a mighty drama, told amid the great battleships in grim war maneuvers; amid strenuous frays in an Oriental wilderness; amid the confusion and bustle of marine barracks—but, after all, these thrills, bits of comedy, and inspiring spectacles are incidental to the love of a young American and a pretty girl—and the gruff but fatherly love of a grizzled marine sergeant for the boys he scores and belabors like a terrible taskmaster, but at heart is proud of.

It is the story of the soul of the marine corps—the story of the human loves, tragedies, and ideals of those whom the world knows as "First to fight." And it's glorious entertainment! One roars with laughter at William Haines, as the recruit, in his troubles with the paint—his introduction to the "Admiral's barge"—and his troubles with the sergeant that land him in the brig. One thrills at the mighty spectacle of a whole battle fleet in maneuvers—its guns belching flame—and the grim marines who feed them their explosive food.

It's the story of the soul of America. Lon Chaney, as the grizzled sergeant, has a role the like of which he never played and may never play again—a role he does not act—but literally lives. It may well go down as one of the real Chaney classics.

Eleanor Boardman makes a charming heroine and Carmel Myers a subtle Oriental vampire. Mitchell Lewis as the bandit chief, and Eddie Gribbon as the comic corporal, contribute some gems of acting. George Hill, the director, has created a notable successor to "The Barrier," "Zander the Great" and others of his best known features of the screen.

Marine First in Peking

The first person to enter the Forbidden City of Peking during the Boxer uprising in China was "Wreck" Kelly of the United States Marines, who was so thin he was able to crawl under the gates and open them from the inside.

Aircraft Production Up 65.8 Pct. in Year

Washington.—Air craft production showed an increase of 65.8 per cent during the last year, as compared with 1925, the census bureau announces in connection with the opening of the aircraft exhibition here.

Airplanes numbering 1,179 were produced and, in addition, seven sea planes, as against 711 airplanes and 78 seaplanes manufactured in 1925. Total value of the airplane output was $8,771,077 and the seaplanes $90,950, compared with $5,908,335 and $765,324 in 1925.

The total value of products reported for 1926 by establishments in the aircraft industry proper is $20,081,181, an increase of 90.3 per cent compared with $12,524,719 for 1925. There were 67 establishments, including five aircraft engine plants. New York had 16 establishments, Michigan nine, California seven, Illinois and Ohio five each and Missouri and Pennsylvania four each.

NO ONE UNAFRAID ON ALL OCCASIONS

What is the main quality of a hero? Fearlessness, isn't it? You'll say, in discussing the chief character of a favorite book, "Why, there isn't a thing he's afraid of." Often you wish that you were like him.

It's hard to be absolutely unafraid. A courageous hunter of big game, for instance, who will face lions and tigers without a tremor, often will dread crossing a busy street, through traffic that you would navigate without a single thought. He feels safe in the jungle, where he is at home. A lion as big as a house couldn't scare him, but he loses his head in traffic because it is unfamiliar to him.

Most of your fears, if backed into a corner, will turn out to be as thin as a halloween ghost. Next time you are afraid of something, examine it from all angles and see whether it is really as terrible as it seems. It probably won't be.—Washington Star

The only floating postoffice in the world is the little government steamer Bielman which delivers mail to the passing vessels in the Detroit river, at Detroit, Mich., during the season of navigation on the Great Lakes. A. Schantz, president of the Detroit & Cleveland Navigation company which operates passenger and package freight boat lines between Detroit, Buffalo, Cleveland and Chicago.

PROPER WALK ON COUNTRY HIGHWAY

Children in Rural Sections Know Better Than Walk With Traffic.

Do you know the proper way to walk on a country highway?

Most persons, especially the city bred, do not, and so the Chicago Motor club, in the poster issued to school children, illustrates the proper method of walking on a country road.

Children Visit Country.

In 25,000 classrooms in this territory the following bulletin, prepared by the club, will be read:

"June days are here; many children living in cities and towns will go to the country. The lesson taught by the poster does not apply to country children. Children who live in the country know better than to walk with traffic, that is, to walk on the right side of the road. Country children always walk on the left side of the roadway, against traffic. Visitors from the city and town are the ones who need this warning.

Some Drivers Careless.

"Cars travel swiftly on country highways; drivers are not looking for anything to cross their paths. If you were to walk with traffic a car might bear down upon you before you could get out of the way or before the driver could stop his car. Many accidents have happened in this way. Drivers whose vision has been obscured by other cars, a turn in the road, a hill, or by poor light have struck persons walking on the right side of the roadway. These accidents, never would have happened if the persons injured had known that the only safe way to walk on a country road was to walk against the traffic."

Speeders Pulled Up by Sounding of Car Horn

One way to make a person behave is to make his misbehavior conspicuous. On this theory, a plan is to be tried in California of sounding the horn thrice when one observes another driver in reckless disregard of law and common safety.

Three toots of the horn are supposed to mean, "Stop that, guy!" It is hoped that this will make the reckless driver ashamed of himself. Perhaps he was not aware that he was doing wrong. Traffic cops say most drivers on being stopped declare they did not realize they were speeding.

If the fellow does not give heed, other drivers are supposed to take up the three-toot cry and the supposition is that the offender will fear that police will hear it and interpret it as meaning "Stop that guy!" Same words; just a comma left out.

Flattening of Springs Interferes With Action

Keeping springs fit is not a matter merely of keeping the friction qualities between the leaves constant and in keeping with the car. A point usually overlooked is that springs tend to flatten out so they are unable to do their best work. This also interferes with the action of the devices that control the spring recoil.

It is the first half-inch of spring deflection that makes for the easiest ride. This is when the springs are doing their best work as the car's natural shock absorbers, and no amount of added equipment can compensate for this loss, which develops through wear. When springs flatten just a quarter of an inch, it is obvious that this much of their first half-inch of best deflection has been sacrificed.

The remedy is to have them removed and rearched.

Open Garage Doors

Be sure that the windows and doors of your garage are open ere starting your automobile, cautions a bulletin issued by the national safety council, which reminds motorists that all gasoline engines when running generate carbon monoxide gas. Scores of motor vehicle owners have died as a result of breathing a small quantity of this odorless gas which cannot be seen. Fresh air alone will avert this hazard.

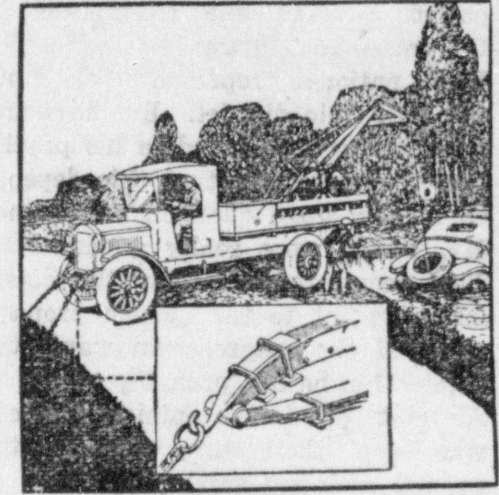

Obedience to Traffic Lights Is Important

Now that traffic lights have become rather universal in large cities as well as in small towns, it is important that every automobile driver get behind the movement to use these signals to the very best advantage. They are not perfect by any means, but with a little co-operation from the progressive car owner and driver, it is obvious that many of the present difficulties will be ironed out and the situation cleared to the advantage of everyone.

One thing to remember in driving through a city in which traffic light signals are employed is to stop on the far side of any street intersection when it is possible. Very frequently when driving along the street one sees a friend and stops to give him a lift. At other times it is a case of allowing a passenger to alight. Whatever the occasion may be for stopping, other than those halts required by the exigencies of traffic itself and obedience to the traffic lights, it is best to stop on the far side so that when one is ready to start again, it is not necessary to wait for the signal. Also it obviates the possibility of stopping some other drivers who may be following.

Hooks on Truck Springs Found Handy in Lifting

The installation of heavy hooks on the ends of front springs of trucks has been found convenient, especially on wrecking cars carrying a crane. When the crane is used to lift a heavy weight, the front end has a tendency to rise, but by anchoring it securely with chains slipped over the hooks on the springs, as shown in the drawing, the trouble is entirely eliminated. If the truck is stuck in a mud hole, the hooks are handy for hitching to a tractor or another truck, and there are several other purposes for which the hooks can be used.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Many Baltimore Deaths Blamed on Jay Walking

Baltimore City has more jay walkers than any other city of its size in the country, according to John H. Truett, director of the Baltimore safety council. Mr. Truett made the statement while discussing the increased number of traffic fatalities in the city.

According to a report of the United States Department of Commerce, such deaths increased 125 per cent over the corresponding period of 1926.

"Four traffic policemen are unable to keep the women on the sidewalks at one crossing in the shopping district while the traffic signal indicates 'stop,'" Mr. Truett asserted. "Compare that with conditions on the busiest streets of New York, Cleveland Boston or other cities."

Version B: "You see, Judge, when the officer held up his hand I thought he was waving, so I waved back. I did not know he was following me. Then when I turned into an alley there was no alley there."

One pedestrian says the trouble about a woman motorist is that she always thinks she has the right of way, says the Houston Post-Dispatch. Here in Houston, if she thinks that way, she has; we never dispute it.

FILING CABINETS SHIPPED VIA AIRWAY

When the Union Trust company of Cleveland wanted a certain type of cabinet and none was to be found nearer than the factory in Buffalo, the latter made delivery by airway and highway in order not to inconvenience a customer. The photograph shows the cabinet being transferred from the plane to the truck at the Cleveland flying field after a 300-mile flight from Buffalo.

SOMETHING UNIQUE IN DELIVERY TRUCKS

The eleventh annual convention of the Retail Delivery association of the National Retail Dry Goods association was held at Chicago. One of the features of the convention was the motor cycle equipped with side car. The photograph shows Peggy Byron and the truck.

MAIN ESSENTIAL OF GOOD DRIVER

Should Extend That Courtesy to Others Which He Expects to Receive.

"The main essential of a good driver is to behave as a gentleman on the road, and to extend that courtesy to other users of the road which you expect to receive from them. 'During a recent trip to Natal,' says an official, 'I found that the majority of motor drivers there gave the approaching vehicle sufficient space to pass in perfect safety. This is a lesson which I think should be well impressed upon every motor vehicle driver.'" says a writer in the Montreal Star. "The great majority of drivers on the public road today seem to take a delight in passing each other as close as possible—sometimes with only a matter of three or four inches to spare—forgetting that those three or four inches might land them perhaps for three or four months in the hospital.

Cause of Many Accidents.

"The public would be shocked to learn the number of casualties admitted to our various hospitals through careless driving and through not taking proper and safe precautions when overtaking or meeting another vehicle. It is deplorable to state that large numbers of these cases are attributed to motor-cycle drivers. Watch them any day in the street and you will find them racing past each other with only a few inches to spare. The slightest little swerve, stone, or bump in the street and a horrible accident is the result, perhaps disfiguring a driver for life.

"In approaching busy cross traffic, a competent driver should slow up so as to have his vehicle under proper control, and to be able, if necessary, to stop 'dead' without damage to his vehicle. The various motor clubs are doing a lot of good in this matter, and with their further co-operation it is hoped soon to have the ranks of the unscrupulous driver reduced to a minimum.

Pedestrian is Blamed.

"Now, there is another individual who is to blame for a great many accidents that occur daily. Whenever an accident happens to this individual—at least in nine cases out of ten—the motorist is held blameworthy. Why? For the simple reason that the pedestrian thinks, because the motorist is moving faster, he must be in the wrong, which is not always the case.

"To the motor driver, I would suggest that he become a 'gentleman of the road,' and that he act up to it in every way possible. To the pedestrian, I counsel that he think and look before entering a public road, and that he remember there are such things as motor vehicles in this world, which move fast and have only the public road to move along."

Abandon Race for Cars Run With Oil Engines

The proposed 24-hour race for cars driven by heavy oil engines, which was planned for next fall at the Indianapolis motor speedway to encourage development of this type of engine for automotive use, has been abandoned for the year, according to announcement made by T. E. Meyers, manager of the speedway, at a recent meeting of the Indiana section of the Society of Engineers.

The reason for the postponement is that a race next fall would not allow sufficient time to formulate rules that would be fair and practical for engineers to design and factories to build cars to compete in it.

Salvage Value of Car

Where an injured automobile is neither totally destroyed nor capable of being repaired but has a salvage value after such injury, which salvage value is greater than the cost of removing and saving it, the measure of damage is the difference between its value at the place immediately before and immediately after the injury, together with interest, according to a ruling of an Oklahoma court.

Gas for Motors Varies
Little Through Season

Motor gasoline being produced for consumption by American motorists has become well stabilized.

The general nature and characteristics of motor gasoline show that the product now being marketed has become standardized, with little difference between "winter" and "summer" gasoline, according to the bureau of mines, which has just completed its fifteenth of a series of semi-annual surveys. Samples have been collected by representatives of the bureau in all important marketing territories.

Results of the survey show that gasoline being sold this winter is practically the same as that sold a year ago.

The motor gasoline survey recently completed was conducted in New York city, Washington, Pittsburgh, Chicago, New Orleans, St. Louis, Denver, San Francisco, Bartlesville, Okla., and Laramie, Wyo.

Scientists Test Paint
Used in Street Marks

What kind of paint lasts longest despite the passage of innumerable wheels and feet over it? Scientists at the United States bureau of standards in Washington are now attempting to solve that riddle by making a series of tests of different kinds of paint used as traffic markers in the streets. The strips of different paints are painted on the streets near the bureau and a careful check made on the wearing qualities of the samples.

Motoring Expense Kept
Low by Traveling Slow

Motorists who compare upkeep and costs are all left in the shade by the feat of three Britons who drove a second-hand car 12,000 miles from Singapore to London on £5.

It was not phenomenally low gas consumption or everlasting tires which made the exploit possible, but the fact that the motorists took 15 months to complete the journey and worked on odd jobs whenever funds ran too low.

The car reached England in fairly good shape, with the exception of a new front axle constructed from an old boiler tube picked up in Asiatic Turkey when the old axle smashed after the car had fallen into a ravine.

AUTOMOBILE ITEMS

There is a movement on foot in various places to make pedestrians carry lights at night. Have the motorists been missing some of them in the dark?

The human flesh is a poor register of cold from the viewpoint of the motor. The damp day makes the driver shiver, but it is cool, crisp weather that hurts machinery.

Heavy automobile taxes in England are said to be responsible for increasing use of work horses. We thought money made the mare go, and here it is bringing the horse back again.

The attorney general has ruled that automobiles equipped with living quarters are passenger cars and not trucks, but some of them might be assessed as real estate and improvements.

THE LOGAN ELM FOOD CLUB HAD GOOD MEETING

Interesting Program Rendered--Next Meeting With Mrs. B. W. Young.

The Logan Elm Food club held its third meeting at the Pickaway township school building June 8.

Our meeting was opened by singing the first stanza of "America." The meeting was called to order by the president, Mary Ruth Tolbert, and the minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary. The roll call was answered by some helpful things we have done since school has been out. There were two members that were not present.

The old business was voting for a photographer who is Mary Elizabeth Rader. New business was reading of the constitution and by-laws. The critics and program committee were appointed. The president and secretary took charge of measuring and weighing the girls.

At the next meeting Rosemary Jackson will score the food habits. Individual demonstration on measuring by Mary E. Rader.

Our meetings will be held the second and fourth Wednesday of each month. Our next meeting will be held June 22, at the beautiful country home of Mrs. Bernard Young. Ruth McKenzie, Reporter.

LUTHERANS TO SUPPORT PROHIBITION

Money Formerly Spent For Drink Goes to Buy Homes For Wage Earners.

Benefits of prohibition have been sufficient "to justify the church in its continued support," says a report of the moral and social welfare committee of the Lutheran synod of New York and New England made public Monday.

Supporting opposition to "any efforts to annul or to modify the eighteenth amendment," the report cites prohibition as responsible for "a notable diversion of money, which formerly was spent for alcoholic drink to the purchasing and furnishing of homes, to education and to a higher standard of living, especially among wage earners."

The report will be presented to the twenty-sixth annual meeting of the synod, opening at Utica Tuesday evening.

Now a Metal Clarinet

Especially adapted for localities subjected to sharp changes in temperature and for traveling orchestras that encounter a wide range of weather conditions, a metal clarinet has been introduced in America from France. It is said to have the same tone quality, correct intonation, evenness and carrying power of the wood instrument, and the added advantage of being immune to cracking and checking.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Clothespin King Now 102

Valentine Smith, a gypsy, famous throughout the midlands of Ireland for his skill in making clothespins, recently celebrated his one-hundred-second birthday. Living in a wigwam near Coseley, he retains all his faculties and says he is "good for some years yet." He has never smoked. His cooking is done by a daughter, aged seventy.

Airplane to Be Fast

A new airplane that is claimed to be able to travel between Rome and New York in six hours and between Rome and London in one hour is being examined by experts of Europe. It is proposed to fly the machine at an altitude of 25,000 feet, where the atmosphere is so rarefied that there would be little air resistance.

Chinese Caste System

The traditional Chinese social system reorganized four main classes below the priest-emperor, of which the first was the literary class. In the time of Confucius the education of the literary class included what was known as the six accomplishments—archery, horsemanship, rites, music, history and mathematics.

NO ONE UNAFRAID ON ALL OCCASIONS

What is the main quality of a hero? Fearlessness, isn't it? You'll say, in discussing the chief character of a favorite book, "Why, there isn't a thing he's afraid of." Often you wish that you were like him.

It's hard to be absolutely unafraid. A courageous hunter of big game, for instance, who will face lions and tigers without a tremor, often will dread crossing a busy street, through traffic that you would navigate without a single thought. He feels safe in the jungle, where he is at home. A lion as big as a house couldn't scare him, but he loses his head in traffic because it is unfamiliar to him.

Most of your fears, if backed into a corner, will turn out to be as thin as a halloween ghost. Next time you are afraid of something, examine it from all angles and see whether it is really as terrible as it seems. It probably won't be.—Washington Star

FLOATING POSTOFFICE

The only floating postoffice in the world is the little government steamer Bielman which delivers mail to the passing vessels in the Detroit river, at Detroit, Mich., during the season of navigation on the Great Lakes. During the 235 days of navigation last season the marine branch of the Detroit postoffice delivered two million letters and telegrams to the passing boats and received 1,225 letters and telegrams to be forwarded; including money orders, parcels and newspapers a total of 3,503,000 pieces of mail matter was handled by the marine postoffice, according to A. A. Schantz, president of the Detroit & Cleveland Navigation company which operates passenger and package freight boat lines between Detroit, Buffalo, Cleveland and Chicago.

PROPER WALK ON COUNTRY HIGHWAY

Children in Rural Sections Know Better Than Walk With Traffic.

Do you know the proper way to walk on a country highway?

Most persons, especially the city bred, do not, and so the Chicago Motor club, in the poster issued to school children, illustrates the proper method of walking on a country road.

Children Visit Country.

In 25,000 classrooms in this territory the following bulletin, prepared by the club, will be read:

"June days are here; many children living in cities and towns will go to the country. The lesson taught by the poster does not apply to country children. Children who live in the country know better than to walk with traffic, that is, to walk on the right side of the road. Country children always walk on the left side of the roadway, against traffic. Visitors from the city and town are the ones who need this warning.

Some Drivers Careless.

"Cars travel swiftly on country highways; drivers are not looking for anything to cross their paths. If you were to walk with traffic a car might bear down upon you before you could get out of the way or before the driver could stop his car. Many accidents have happened in this way. Drivers whose vision has been obscured by other cars, a turn in the road, a hill, or by poor light have struck persons walking on the right side of the roadway. These accidents, never would have happened if the persons injured had known that the only safe way to walk on a country road was to walk against the traffic."

Speeders Pulled Up by Sounding of Car Horn

One way to make a person behave is to make his misbehavior conspicuous. On this theory, a plan is to be tried in California of sounding the horn thrice when one observes another driver in reckless disregard of law and common safety.

Three toots of the horn are supposed to mean, "Stop that, guy!" It is hoped that this will make the reckless driver ashamed of himself. Perhaps he was not aware that he was doing wrong. Traffic cops say most drivers on being stopped declare they did not realize they were speeding.

If the fellow does not give heed, other drivers are supposed to take up the three-toot cry and the supposition is that the offender will fear that police will hear it and interpret it as meaning "Stop that guy!" Same words; just a comma left out.

Flattening of Springs Interferes With Action

Keeping springs fit is not a matter merely of keeping the friction qualities between the leaves constant and in keeping with the car. A point usually overlooked is that springs tend to flatten out so they are unable to do their best work. This also interferes with the action of the devices that control the spring recoil.

It is the first half-inch of spring deflection that makes for the easiest ride. This is when the springs are doing their best work as the car's natural shock absorbers, and no amount of added equipment can compensate for this loss, which develops through wear. When springs flatten just a quarter of an inch, it is obvious that this much of their first half-inch of best deflection has been sacrificed. The remedy is to have them removed and rearched.

Open Garage Doors

Be sure that the windows and doors of your garage are open ere starting your automobile, cautions a bulletin issued by the national safety council, which reminds motorists that all gasoline engines when running generate carbon monoxide gas. Scores of motor vehicle owners have died as a result of breathing a small quantity of this odorless gas which cannot be seen. Fresh air alone will avert this hazard.

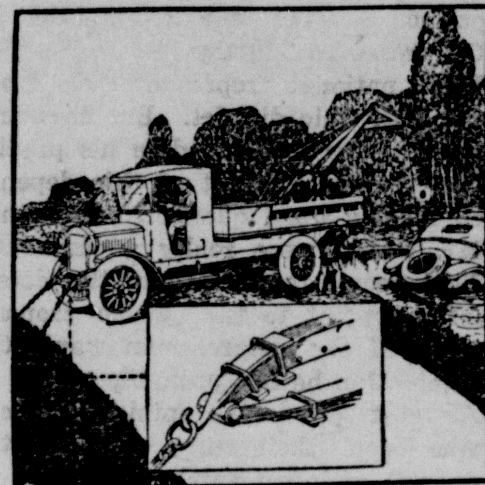

Obedience to Traffic Lights Is Important

Now that traffic lights have become rather universal in large cities as well as in small towns, it is important that every automobile driver get behind the movement to use these signals to the very best advantage. They are not perfect by any means, but with a little co-operation from the progressive car owner and driver, it is obvious that many of the present difficulties will be ironed out and the situation cleared to the advantage of everyone.

One thing to remember in driving through a city in which traffic light signals are employed is to stop on the far side of any street intersection when it is possible. Very frequently when driving along the street one sees a friend and stops to give him a lift. At other times it is a case of allowing a passenger to alight. Whatever the occasion may be for stopping, other than those halts required by the exigencies of traffic itself and obedience to the traffic lights, it is best to stop on the far side so that when one is ready to start again, it is not necessary to wait for the signal. Also it obviates the possibility of stopping some other drivers who may be following.

Hooks on Truck Springs Found Handy in Lifting

The installation of heavy hooks on the ends of front springs of trucks has been found convenient, especially on wrecking cars carrying a crane. When the crane is used to lift a heavy weight, the front end has a tendency to rise, but by anchoring it securely with chains slipped over the hooks on the springs, as shown in the drawing, the trouble is entirely eliminated. If the truck is stuck in a mud hole, the hooks are handy for hitching to a tractor or another truck, and there are several other purposes for which the hooks can be used.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Many Baltimore Deaths Blamed on Jay Walking

Baltimore City has more jay walkers than any other city of its size in the country, according to John H. Truett, director of the Baltimore safety council. Mr. Truett made the statement while discussing the increased number of traffic fatalities in the city.

According to a report of the United States Department of Commerce, such deaths increased 125 per cent over the corresponding period of 1926.

"Four traffic policemen are unable to keep the women on the sidewalks at one crossing in the shopping district while the traffic signal indicates 'stop,'" Mr. Truett asserted. "Compare that with conditions on the busiest streets of New York, Cleveland, Boston or other cities."

Version B: "You see, Judge, when the officer held up his hand I thought he was waving, so I waved back. I did not know he was following me. Then when I turned into an alley there was no alley there."

One pedestrian says the trouble about a woman motorist is that she always thinks she has the right of way, says the Houston Post-Dispatch. Here in Houston, if she thinks that way, she has; we never dispute it.

FILING CABINETS SHIPPED VIA AIRWAY

When the Union Trust company of Cleveland wanted a certain type of cabinet and none was to be found nearer than the factory in Buffalo, the latter made delivery by airway and highway in order not to inconvenience a customer. The photograph shows the cabinet being transferred from the plane to the truck at the Cleveland flying field after a 300-mile flight from Buffalo.
